Nazis' Kiev Drive Hurls Back Reds

Failure Dogs Nazi In Heroic Moment

By John Steinbeck

The German corporal stood disconsolate on the little pier, and his eyes stared blindly into the powerful flashlights that shone on him, and he held his hands very high above his head. In his face and in his uniform and in his posture there was proof that the master race is not infallible. The corporal was a failure. In fact, the corporal was a dope. You could see that when they passed out the uniforms he had got one that was left over. His holster had held a Luger pistol and the corporal's last act before he surrendered had been to throw his pistol into the water beside the pier.

Fails on Last Job

He had failed at the last job he had been given to do. When his fellows retreated he had been assigned to destroy the E-boat beside the pier, and he had been given several of the big potato-masher grenades to sink it in the channel. Perhaps he had been excited. Or perhaps he had never done anything right in his life. He looked that way.

Anyway, the first grenade he had thrown missed the boat entirely and exploded in the water. The second grenade had torn off a little piece of the forward decking, while the third had in some curious way got into the food supply and had managed to blow canned milk and tomato ketchup all over the boat. But the hull itself had not been hurt at all.

But there the corporal stood, a failure. In a race of heroes he was a dope and he looked very despondent about it. He smiled a little sheepishly in embarrassment. Perhaps he had hoped to escape to join his comrades, for he had a small cheap leather suitcase beside him. An American sergeant frisked him and took his papers and made sure that he had no other weapons. Among his papers there was a picture of his wife, a big, tough woman, and you could see that the corporal had not even been master in his own home.

Things of Terror

The piercing eye and great folded biceps of his amazonian wife must have been things of terror to him. They should have drafted her, not her husband. It was apparent in her face that she thought him a dope, too.

The sergeant finished going through his pockets and kneeled down beside the little suitcase. And here a further failure was revealed, as though it had been written. They had not even let him have any good loot. Probably when every one else had finished, he had been permitted to steal a few things, but there was nothing of value left. In his suitcase were two dented cans of Italian sardines, a red sweater, frayed at the elbows, an enormous pair of lawn lady's pants, with old-fashioned lace at the knees. The pants were not very clean nor very good, and the best years of their life had been gone through. There was also in the suitcase a little pad of writing paper, a broken fountain pen, a piece of a crupper from a harness, a painted cup without a handle, two threadbare handkerchiefs and a black vest, shiny with age.

"You can take down your hands now," the sergeant said.

But the man made no attempt to put down his hands, and he even resisted a little when the sergeant took him firmly by the wrists and put his hands down for him. His eyes rolled with terror. Perhaps he thought it was a trap or just possibly he remembered things his people had done to prisoners.

Apologetic Grunt

He wasn't a very big prize. The four paratroopers looked a little embarrassed when they escorted him to the boat and helped him in. And as he stepped over the side he tripped and fell on his back in the bottom of the whale boat. Poor Corporal Bumblefoot! He had probably always been like that. They had tried to make of him the lean and tigerish soldier that all the posters show, that Dr. Goebbels talks about. He had been given the best training and the best indoctrination and he had emerged just what he was, a dope.

With an apologetic grunt he scrambled up and seated himself. His eyes wandered to the dark

Flu Epidemic Believed Tapering Off

New Cases, School Absences Decline; Little Crowding Of Public Vehicles

Absence reports from offices, schools and the transit company showed a slight turn downward yesterday, as Health Department officials anticipated the gradual falling off of the current flu epidemic, new cases notwithstanding.

Although a Health Department survey was still in the making last night, Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said certain large blocks of the city's population showed very distinct drops in numbers of new cases.

Got "Staggered" Start

However, all groups were not attacked at the same time, Dr. Cumming pointed out, and there are still some areas where as many new cases as formerly are being reported.

Deaths from influenza complications have been few, it was pointed out. Health Officer George C. Ruhland said he had asked the Bureau of Vital Statistics to obtain further details on the death from influenza reported Monday, since deaths from simple influenza are unusual.

Meanwhile another death as the result of influenza was reported yesterday by Dr. Winthrop P. Wilcox, whose death certificate said that a patient, Mrs. Clara B. Radley, 73, of 514 19th st. nw., had died of a heart ailment, myocarditis, following two weeks' illness with influenza.

Dr. Wilcox reported he had been treating the patient since December 6. According to health officials, the heart ailment is one of the after-effects of the flu that prove fatal.

Four deaths from pneumonia variations were reported yesterday to the vital statistics office, two of these being of persons over 80 years of age.

238 Transit Workers Ill

The Capital Transit Co., which yesterday specially invoked drivers to not overcrowd vehicles, to keep them at reasonably cool temperatures, and to open and air them out at the end of each run, had 238 operators ill—265 had been out the day before. The company normally averages 90 to 100 daily absences.

Drivers were told to firmly insist that passengers distribute themselves throughout streetcars and buses, and observers stationed at street corners were said to have noted no great overloading despite the fact that 90 fewer vehicles ran yesterday than were scheduled. Transit officials judged many workers stayed at home because they had the flu and shoppers avoided rush hours so as not to get it.

Instructive visiting nurses received calls from 103 to 131 new respiratory cases each day last week, Gertrude H. Bowling, di-

Blood Donations Reduced by Flu

The influenza epidemic, officials at the Red Cross blood donor center revealed yesterday, is responsible for a drop in donations of 200 below the daily quota of 550. Christmas shopping also was blamed for the recent poor response from District residents.

The Red Cross urges those who are not suffering from the flu, or who have recovered from a cold more than two weeks to telephone the center, 51 Louisiana ave. nw., at District 3200, for an appointment.

Security Tax Delay Voted By Committee

By Samuel W. Bell

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday voted to postpone for another year the 100 per cent increase in the Social Security Tax for old-age and survivors benefits, scheduled to go up January 1 from 1 to 2 per cent each on employer and employe on the first $3000 of gross income.

The vote on the proposed "freeze" which previously had been written into tax law for the years of 1942 and 1943 was reported as 16 to 5.

The committee likewise adhered, by a vote of 11 to 10, to the tentative decision reached Monday to keep a House-approved provision requiring nonprofit organizations, including labor unions, to file informational returns with the Treasury, although their transactions may be exempt from income taxes.

The committee virtually completed the corporate tax provisions of the tax bill by voting to retain the present combined normal and surtax on corporations at its maximum of 40 per cent, rejecting a Treasury suggestion that the combined normal and surtax be raised to 45 per cent in lieu of the House-approved

Fight to Halt Rail Pay Rise Opens in House

Roosevelt Expected To Enter Battle When He Comes Back

By Robert C. Albright

A last stand Administration fight to stop the Truman-Crosser rail pay increase resolution has opened in the House, with a strong probability that President Roosevelt will return in time to take a hand.

This was indicated yesterday as War Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson was granted a hearing before the House Interstate Commerce Committee tomorrow, slowing the drive to report out the bill.

Vinson warned a Senate committee last month that congressional approval of the 8-cent-an-hour pay increase for 1,097,000 nonoperating rail employes will scrap the "Little Steel" formula, and force an inflationary retreat from the wage stabilization line.

Vinson's warnings, backed by a Nationwide radio appeal by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, failed to stop the bill in the Senate, where Majority Leader Barkley joined a 74-to-4 vote for the bill. House sponsors predicted correspondingly overwhelming House approval, but Vinson's request for a hearing staved off a House showdown at least for this week and possibly until after the holidays.

Vinson's refusal to concede defeat carried more than ordinary significance in view of the President's expected early return.

Compromise Possible

In a responsible Administration House quarter there was talk of possible White House intervention in behalf of a settlement that would ward off a crumpling blow at war stabilization machinery.

Both Vinson and Byrnes plainly regarded the rail wage bid as equal in seriousness to the congressional drive to repeal price-holding food subsidies, and as part and parcel of the same inflation threat.

Delay of a House vote until the President's return and at least one last effort at a settlement appeared a strong probability last night.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday completed scheduled testimony on the resolution, with a statement by Jacob Aronson, vice president and general

Nazi Armor Fails to Halt 5th's Drive

Big Guns Smash Enemy Tanks as Canadians Push To Take Pescara

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Dec. 14 (AP).—Throwing reserves of armor into a desperate counterattack against Canadian troops fighting yard by yard toward the seaport of Pescara, the Germans suffered heavy losses in tanks and men from the fire of Eighth Army artillery concealed in the hills, it was announced today.

The Nazi command resorted to this costly measure in a futile effort to prevent the reinforced Canadians from closing in on the road junction of Ortona, 11 miles below Pescara on the Adriatic coast.

The result was the same as that experienced by both sides on previous occasions both in Africa and Italy when tanks ventured within range of well-placed heavy guns.

Battle for Ortona

Shaking off this and similarly fierce Nazi counterassaults, the Canadians continued doggedly to win the heights overlooking Ortona. The whole current thrust of the Eighth Army up the Adriatic coast hinges on the Canadians' success in taking Ortona.

The desperate nature of the enemy's resistance was emphasized by the fact that for nearly a week heavy fighting had been in progress on a 2-mile-wide strip between the Moro River and a lateral road leading inland from Ortona 12 miles to Orsogna.

A New Zealand division was reported attacking Nazi positions on high ground on the left flank of the Canadians in an effort to relieve some enemy pressure in the coastal sector.

On snow-covered hills farther inland, whene Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army is pressing toward the provincial capital of Chieti, Indian troops broke into German positions for a limited advance and took 50 prisoners.

5th Army in Gun Duels

Activity on Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army front again was limited to artillery duels and patrol movements. German self-propelled artillery and mortars were extremely active in shelling Allied positions along the Liri Valley northwest of Mignano.

Fifth Army patrols jabbing deep into German positions in this area captured a number of prisoners, who described Nazi losses in the recent fighting around Mignano as heavy.

Bad weather again kept the big bombers idle, but the Tactical Air Force ranged over the enemy's supply lines behind the battle front and knocked out a number of bridges. Two Allied planes were missing in all operations, including forays in support of the Yugoslavs.

This was the 102d day of Allied operations on the Italian Peninsula, and it found the invasion forces still some 90 miles from Rome at the closest point.

Hull Declares Butler Blast Is Unfounded

Flays Charge U. S. 'Played for Sucker' In Latin America

Secretary of State Hull last night labeled "unfair and unfounded" a charge by Senator Butler (Republican) of Nebraska that the United States is being played for a profligate sucker in Latin America.

Hull declared that the charge was "calculated to injure" the whole good neighbor policy.

In a hotly worded reply to criticisms voiced by Butler after a 20,000-mile tour of Central and South America, Hull praised the Latin republics for their contributions to the Allied war effort and declared:

"It is distressing that at a time when the Nation is engaged in a gigantic effort to defeat the assassins of civilization a wholly indefensible attack should be leveled at a policy so universally acclaimed.

Tribute to Good Sense

"It is a tribute to the good sense of the people of the Americas, who have now had 10 years of experience with the good neighbor policy, that these gross misrepresentations were not generally believed."

Hull's 1000-word statement followed by a day a reply to the Nebraska Senator made on the Senate floor Monday by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee.

Acknowledging the possibility of "errors of judgment" in programs carried out under pressure of war, Hull said nevertheless the main question now is whether "we shall forget the broad essential nature of our cooperative activities in the other American republics and turn to a controversy over a limited number of items of wartime expenditure."

He noted that 13 of the Ameri-

Record Bomb Load Poured Into Gasmata

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Wednesday), Dec. 15 (AP). The rising strength of Allied air power in the Southwest Pacific has struck again at New Britain, this time with a new record weight of bombs.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique said today the Gasmata area, a possible invasion point on the south central coast, bore the brunt of an assault by more than 100 Liberator heavy and Mitchell medium bombers which, escorted by Lightning fighters, dropped 248 tons of bombs in wave after wave of a midday attack.

Of all the enemy centers on the island, only Rabaul, oft-smacked Japanese base on the northeast tip, has received a greater pounding in a single raid. Last October 12 that place was hammered with 350 tons of bombs.

Rabaul Airdrome Hit

Lakunai airdrome at Rabaul also was hit Sunday by medium bombers.

Gasmata has felt the destructive power of more than 650 tons of bombs in the last few weeks.

Previous raids had been notable for the absence of enemy fighter interception, but in this one 19 Japanese planes rose to dispute the air. Two of them were shot down. All our planes returned.

Simultaneous aerial blows also were dealt Cape Hoskins on the north coast of the island, and at

Coal 'Catastrophe' Feared by OWI

The Office of War Information said yesterday the coal shortage is so acute that if stocks cannot be replenished next summer the situation will "approach catastrophe."

However, the Bituminous Coal Institute and the Anthracite Institute replied, in New York, that "people who heat by coal should be as comfortable this winter as last winter," that there is a "normal supply, but householders can't expect to keep their coal bins full continuously."

Eden Reports Eastern Talks Shortened War

'Message of Good Cheer' Hailed by House of Commons

By Richard C. Massock

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden today brought Commons a promise of the war's shortening and prospects of enduring big-power collaboration for lasting peace from the Middle East conferences of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill with President Chiang Kai-shek, Premier Stalin and President Inonu of Turkey.

In a "message of good cheer," he reported encouragement among Allied leaders at the outcome of their three conferences of "world significance," whose "value could hardly be exaggerated," yet he cautioned the cheering chamber against "easy optimism," for the very magnitude of the plans to beat Germany and Japan, he said, "will call for immense effort in the coming months from each and all of the United Nations."

Speaking in the absence of Churchill, who still is engaged in important work in an undisclosed "sphere where he now is," Eden said the foundations were laid at Teheran for the creation of an "international order firmer in strength and unity than any enemy could seek to challenge."

Plans far more complete than

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday directed preparation of a resolution authorizing funds for the House to employ its own counsel in a pay suit brought by Robert Morss Lovett, Goodwin B. Attorney General Biddle has said he agreed with President Roosevelt that the congressional order was an unlawful infringement on the powers of the executive branch.

But Russians Take Enemy's Key Bastion On Dnieper

German Smash With 2000 Tanks Forces 30-Mile Soviet Retreat

London (Wednesday), Dec. 15 (AP).—The Russians have captured Cherkasy, last major German bastion on the middle Dnieper, and perhaps have opened a new major offensive in northern White Russia, but, Moscow announced today, they were forced back from Radomysl, 55 miles west of Kiev, by a fierce German drive to retake the Ukrainian capital.

More than 6000 Germans were killed in the last days of the stubborn fighting for Cherkasy, a German strong point south of Kiev which guards important railway communications.

"Fighting raged for every street, every basement," said the Moscow midnight communique.

German resistance melted under Russian pressure coming from two directions, and the Germans were cleared from the town, leaving considerable war materials and prisoners in Russian hands.

Guerillas helped by preparing behind German lines landing fields for Soviet air-borne troops, a broadcast said.

New Russian Drive

Berlin radio reports, meanwhile, told of a new Russian drive far to the north near Nevel—about 70 miles from the Latvian border—where Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko, defender of Stalingrad, was on the move with six infantry divisions and two tank corps.

Here Germans admitted they had been forced to give up some positions. The Russians, who rarely announce an offensive until they have made important gains, did not mention the area.

In the Kiev bulge, where Moscow dispatches made clear that the Germans were bringing up still more tanks from the deep rear and were in a position to make a serious bid for Kiev, the Germans attacked with four regiments of infantry and 160 tanks. After several hours' fighting, they were flung back, losing 600 men and 18 tanks. Soviet aircraft were pounding German concentrations, destroying some tanks and about 200 German trucks.

Red Forces Thrust Back

Nevertheless, despite local Russian successes, Field Marshal Gen. Fritz von Mannstein's concentrations of almost 2000 tanks and many divisions of infantry have rolled the Russians back 30 miles from the rail junctions of Korosten and Zhitomir.

But southeast of Kiev in the Dnieper bend a big and important Russian offensive was on the

Sweater Awaits Plucked Turkey That Fled Ice Box

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 14 (AP).—Reporters and photographers of the Augusta Herald staff were on a turkey hunt today.

They were looking for a bird without any feathers and wearing a droopy look.

The turkey, they were told by a schoolteacher, was purchased for Thanksgiving dinner by another schoolteacher. Having no men in the family, the latter hit upon the idea of chloroforming, instead of beheading the bird. She then dry-picked the turkey and put it in the refrigerator.

The following day, the story goes, she opened the refrigerator and the nude turkey staggered out.

Schoolteacher No. 1 stoutly avers that schoolteacher No. 2 was overcome with remorse and fixed a sweater for the defeathered bird.

The Herald staff wants to find out if the turkey outlives Christmas, too.

Away-From-Home Workers

Draft Review Order to Reopen Job Deferment of Thousands

By Walter Wood

National Selective Service headquarters yesterday ordered the review of all occupational deferments granted by appeal boards to men working in areas outside the boards' jurisdictions.

The cases of hundreds of thousands of deferred draft registrants will be reopened by the action.

In the National Capital an estimated 50,000 men who have received deferments from local boards elsewhere will be affected.

Many workers in Washington, it was pointed out, live in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Still others—mainly deferred Federal employes—are registered at local boards in their home towns.

The new Selective Service order requires that the files of their cases be sent for review to the District of Columbia Board of Appeal.

For example, if a man who works for the War Production Board and lives in Silver Spring, Md., has been deferred by his home area appeal board, his case must be re-examined by the board here.

Directly tagged by the new order are men of draft age who left their homes in the States to come to Washington to work in the Navy Yard, the Naval Research Laboratory, Bolling Field, the Army Mapping Service, Bureau of Standards, Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Weather Bureau, the Army and Navy and Federal departments and other Government bureaus directly or indirectly allied with the war effort.

Affected also are other Washington workers in war-supporting activities—policemen, firemen, dairymen, bus and streetcar operators, mechanics and others deferred by draft boards "back home."

Review of the occupational classifications will place additional work on appeal boards, it was said. They have been notified by Selective Service officials to make the necessary appointment of additional appeal panels and send names of prospective new board members to national headquarters for approval.

The order, designed to provide a closer check on deferments in view of the draft of prewar fathers, stipulates that "appeal boards having jurisdiction over the principal place of employment will make the necessary review as contemplated by recently adopted amendments to the Selective Service Training and Service law."

No review will be required, Se-

Bill's 'Appalling Effect'

Davis, in Appeal for Subsidies, Cites Labor's Inflation Fear

By Christine Sadler

Fear of the future, fed by the belief Congress may abandon stable price control policies, is the "real meaning" behind the recent wave of demands for wage increases in the Nation's basic industries, William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, declared yesterday in a letter to Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York, in a last-minute appeal for subsidies to help hold down the cost of living.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee, meeting until after nightfall in an effort to work out a compromise on the subsidy issue, broke up with no agreement. It was scheduled to report to the full committee this morning.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones and Price Administrator Chester Bowles attended the meeting, held in the office of Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky. Barkley said the full committee would decide today whether to give the subcommittee more time, but added that "it doesn't appear very hopeful for an advance agreement; it would appear the issue will have to be decided on the Senate floor."

The "appalling effect" of legislation now before the Senate Banking Committee to abandon subsidies on December 31, Davis declared, would be due to its implication that "Congress has deserted or is about to desert the anti-inflationary position it took" in amending the Price Control Act to direct prices held as nearly as practicable to the levels of September 15, 1942.

WLB has acted in good faith, he said, to make the "sure intent" of Congress effective in the field of wages. "The basic assumption underlying the work of the board,"

It's 'Diethylstilboestrol' Pill

Certain Cure for One Form Of Cancer Declared Found

London, Dec. 14 (INS).—Dr. E. C. Dodds, professor of biochemistry at the University of London, declared tonight a cure for one form of cancer has been discovered.

The treatment, he said, is administered with a new drug known as diethylstilboestrol taken in the form of a synthetic chemical pill.

Dodds, estimating that the use of the drug will save some 4000 lives annually in Britain alone, said much of the preliminary work has been carried on in the United States. The treatment so far has been confined to cancer of the prostate gland.

"During the last year or so in America," he said, "they have reported treatment of this terrible disease by the administration of substances by mouth and the complete disappearance of symptoms without any other treatment.

"We are thankful to report that the American work now has been completely confirmed. For the first time in the history of mankind it is possible to state that one form of cancer can be completely controlled and the patient rendered symptom-free by the administration of a few pills by mouth daily.

"While the actual observation of cases was made by our American colleagues, the weapon used was forged in this country by Englishmen working directly under the influence and support of the British Empire cancer campaign.

"I isolated diethylstilboestrol in 1938 . . . Eighteen months ago American doctors used the product in treating carcinoma of the prostate and every case responded.

"We have treated patients here in the same way. So far our success has been 100 per cent. We regard five years' time to be necessary to be quite sure that the controls are permanent, but scientifically, we are satisfied."

Navy Soon to Deal Heavy Blows—Knox

On Landing Tactics

Knox Replies To Higgins' Criticism

Actions Have Cut Into Japs' Fleet, Secretary Says

By James S. King

The landing boats built by Andrew Jackson Higgins of New Orleans are good, but there are certain situations when amphibious tanks are better vehicles, Navy Secretary Frank Knox said yesterday in response to published reports that Higgins had criticized the way the Navy had used the landing craft in the Gilbert Islands.

Higgins was quoted as saying he had seen films of the Tarawa landings which showed the Higgins-built boats being driven slowly toward the beaches and getting caught on reefs hundreds of yards from their objectives. He said the boats were designed and built so they could be driven full speed across reefs and onto beaches. He added that in tests near New Orleans they were driver across simulated reefs and concrete walls "and we've never torn a bottom out yet."

"I would like to make only this observation," Knox replied. "The men who handle these boats are superbly trained; they're recruited from the Navy and the Coast Guard and they know their jobs. The Higgins boat is a good landing boat. But naturally, if you have vehicles that can walk right over a reef and up on to the beach, it's a pretty useful piece of equipment."

The preliminaries are out of the way now and we are getting ready to drive home some hard blows against the Japanese in the Pacific, Navy Secretary Frank Knox told his press conference yesterday.

"Operations of our combined sea, air and land forces in all areas of the Pacific are going forward in a very satisfactory way," Knox said. "What we have been going through is a period of preparation and training. It is perfectly obvious that what seemed to be only a preliminary has been carried on for the express purpose of decimating the enemy's air and surface strength.

"And the Japanese seem to have contributed to these aims by sending down small task forces which are regularly overwhelmed, permitting us to chip off very important elements of their fleet."

Knox said one of the most striking features of the present Pacific operations is the absence of Japanese transports and cargo ships, with the Japs resorting to self-propelled barges to try to get reinforcemenets to their beleaguered garrisons.

"Happily, we've had the weapon to meet them—PT boats—and they've certainly gone to town," the Seceretary said. "Hundreds of the barges have been sunk and thousands of Japanese soldiers have been lost . . . We frequently knock off 10 barges a day around New Guinea."

Wide Bay on the southeast coast. Australian Beaufort medium bombers, Beaufighters and Douglas attack planes carried the brunt of these attacks.

Air patrols also raided airdromes in the Cape Gloucester area, on the western tip of New Britain.

Three strong predawn counter-attacks against Australian troops in the Ramu Valley, above the Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, were repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy, the communique said.

Along the Huon coast Allied air patrols wrecked 10 enemy barges and Allied light naval units in a night attack sank three barges near Sanga River and nine off Reiss Point.

The sweep of the Allied air strokes included blows at Koepang, Timor Island northwest of Australia, where large fires were started in the town and the wharf area.

Admiral William F. Halsey's headquarters reported that the Solomons air force, in 200 more sorties over invaded Bougainville Island, has dropped 150 tons of explosives, chiefly on supply bases.

march. By taking Cherkasy, Gen. Ivan S. Konev's Second Ukrainian Army rolled the Germans back to the Tasmin River line guarding the rail junction of Smela, and began to swing shut the escape door for the whole Nazi pocket in the area.

Some Russian columns captured several populated places as they advanced on Kirovograd south of Cherkasy, and others captured five more populated places as they worked northward to link the Cherkasy and Kirovograd areas.

The Cherkasy victory, announced by Premier Marshal Stalin in a special order of the day, went to 22 divisions, brigades and other formations—perhaps 200,000 to 300,000 men—under Konev, who first crossed the Dnieper just below Cherkasy on November 19, and immediately fought their way to the outskirts of the city itself, only to be stopped cold by determined Germans fighting to protect as long as possible the large Nazi forces deployed below them.

Fierce fighting preceded the city's fall today, said Premier Stalin.

Half Million Reported Ill of Flu in Berlin

Stockholm, Dec. 15 (Wednesday) (INS).—A half million Berlin residents were reported today to be suffering from "cellar sickness," a form of influenza, as a result of their vigil in damp basements during recent RAF attacks.

At least 2,000 persons died last week from the illness, these reports stated.

Jap Retreat From Changteh Turned Into Complete Rout

Chungking, Dec. 14 (AP).—Powerful Chinese forces supported by their own and American aircraft have turned the retreat of the Japanese from Changteh into a rout, it was stated today by the high command, and have recaptured Shihmen, Linli and a succession of other towns which the invaders had occupied.

The tone of the Chinese communique was triumphant in telling of sweeping successes of the troops carrying on a great encircling maneuver against the Japanese between the Lin and Yangtze Rivers.

By Sunday morning the enemy was completely routed and the Chinese were inflicting innumerable casualties and regaining strategic centers which had been lost during the Japanese march into the "rice bowl" more than a month ago.

Carried on by this momentum, the Chinese troops were surging near even more important goals—Lihsien, the Japanese stronghold on the Lin River, and Ansiang, Nanhsien and Thingshih, all north of Tungting Lake.

The high command said "enemy units lurking in the environs of Changteh have been completely liquidated" and that other remnants north of Shihmen also have been destroyed. One enemy detachment still fighting to the south of Shihmen was being surrounded, it added.

Commons Gets Eden Report On Parleys

were ever before formulated in war have been made for the defeat of Japan, against whose forces, Eden said, the British would fight "to the bitter end, whatever the cost, however long it takes."

Eden told Commons that continuous rain, swollen rivers and mud had slowed the advance of Allied armies in Italy, where American casualties up to November 25 totaled 10,649 and British casualties 16,074.

He said that the British Government looks for France to rise again, and that it does not wish to "impose a three-power will on Europe" but to liberate the German-occupied countries so they can take their places again in the European family.

After having seen Prime Minister Churchill and President Chiang Kai-shek in a map room for hours "diving deep into war plans" with Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek and Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied commander in chief in the Asiatic theater, Eden said he felt that they "speak the same language of determination."

He renewed Britain's pledge to fight as a principal in the Far East because, he said, "to destroy Germany and then make a compromise peace with Japan would only sow the seeds of a third World War."

Eden said that postwar collaboration between Britain and China "both in policy and commerce" were discussed at Cairo, and he expressed confidence that steady progress would be made in both spheres.

As to the Teheran meeting, he said that "any and every topic" was discussed by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

Without divulging Turkey's attitude toward the question of aiding the Allies with bases and the use of the Dardanelles, Eden said he regarded as encouraging the fact that Turkey's relations with the United States and Russia were almost as cordial as with Britain.

Speaking of the French, he said "we believe this great people, 40 million strong and enriched by moral and international qualities which have been theirs throughout their history, will find the spirit to lift them up again from the heavy blows that have been dealt them the last four years."

60% of Main Nazi Industry Held Smashed

By the Associated Press

About 60 per cent of Germany's primary industrial targets already have been destroyed by the hammer-blows of the combined American and British air fleets, it was reliably reported yesterday.

The "primary targets" are 50 industrial centers considered essential to the German war machine, informed persons here said.

If the figures used recently by Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris—40 "vital" centers instead of 50—are used as a basis for estimating damage, the percentage perhaps would be even more impressive. However, Harris classed another 50 industrial targets as "considerably important" to the German war machine, a total of 90 cities within the Reich marked for the kind of destruction visited upon Hamburg, Cologne and Berlin.

The mounting fury of the air offensive is indicated also by an estimate that 85 per cent of all the bomb damage so far accomplished within Germany has been inflicted in 1943. The United States Eighth Air Force particularly is growing constantly in power, and sending progressively larger fleets of heavy bombers over Europe.

Significantly, the mounting strength of Anglo-American air power might be said to be "pyramiding" relative to German air strength, which is declining both because of destroyed or damaged plane factories and because of attrition in air battles.

In the near future, the Germans will probably find it impossible any longer to disperse their air strength; they will have to "guess" the targets of Allied bombers, and concentrate their fighters on the basis of those guesses.

Occasionally they will guess right, and extremely heavy losses can be expected on those occasions. Just as often, however, they will guess wrong, and then the bomber losses will be extraordinarily light—as they have been on one or two recent occasions.

water and you could see in his face that he considered for a moment a hero's death. In his mind he saw himself leap over the side, swim to the bottom, grab a rock and drown himself. And perhaps he saw, too, flags and flowers and a guard of honor over his symbolic grave in Berlin.

He must have seen in his time many such heroic pageants. For a moment his eyes shone with the thought and then reality flooded in on him. He knew what would really happen. Either his pants would catch on the boat and he would hang helplessly head down in the water, or else he would be pulled out with a boat hook, wet and even more embarrassed than he was. That was the way it had always been with him. The glow of glory went out of Corporal Bumblefoot's eyes and he put his head down in his hands and began to cry.

Reds and British Aid Tito as Nazis Strike

Yugoslavia Called Major Battlefield; 1500 Germans Slain

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—Yugoslavia flamed tonight into a major battlefield as the Germans hurled six divisions (perhaps 90,000 men) into one sector alone in eastern Bosnia, and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden disclosed that Britain was helping the Yugoslav army of liberation "in every possible way," with the Russians also going to its aid.

Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) declared in a broadcast communique that 1500 Nazis had been killed as his Partisan troops threw back German assaults.

Dual Pledge of Free Choice

On the political side, Eden declared that both the provisional government of Tito and government-in-exile of King Peter would give the Yugoslav people free choice of leadership after the war, while Tito's radio announced plans to reconstitute the country on a six-nation federal basis.

Saluting Moscow's decision to send a military mission to Tito's new government, Eden told Commons that this joint action had been agreed to as far back as the first Moscow meeting of the tripower foreign ministers, but did not touch upon Russia's open attack on Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Chetnik leader and war minister under King Peter.

Battle for Rail Approaches

On the ebattle front, the action was heaviest in Bosnia where the Germans struck furiously seeking to secure the approaches to the main railway running the length of Yugoslavia through Belgrade, but it also was erupting in the Montenegro-Serbia border area of Sanjak and in Dalmatia.

"Heavy fighting is going on," Tito's radio said. One German tank-supported column captured Plevlje in combat in Sanjak, it added.

Three towns—Duvno, Livno and Grahovo—were lost in heavy fighting on the Dalmatian-Bosnia border, the communique said, but Livno was recaptured.

Split and Sebenik Bombed

Lending air support, Northwest African Air Force planes yesterday bombed Split—first port of Yugoslavia—and Sebenik, Dalmatian coast port which has large shipping facilities and railway yards.

Elsewhere in the Balkans, one report said the opposition forces in Bulgaria had demanded that the pro-Nazi government take the country out of war or resign. Another said the Rumania government soon would move from Bucharest to Brassov near the Hungarian frontier.

Tito's federal plan of reconstituting Yugoslavia was described in a Free Yugoslav broadcast as a sequel to his nine-point constitution. The six proposed units are Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Montenegro-Sanjak and Macedonia.

Nazi-Junker Strife

Rommel May Get Supreme Command

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, sent to shaky northwest Europe as a kind of anti-invasion chief, may get supreme command of the German army in an effort to forestall an anti-Hitler peace plot by Junker generals, refugee leaders with close underground contacts in Germany said tonight.

There are indications that Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt is slated for removal from command of western defenses, which he has held since April, 1942. Von Rundstedt is senior among German military aristocrats recurrently reported just waiting for a strategic moment to attempt an anti-Hitler coup combined with a "merciful peace" bid to the Allies.

That group is reported to have offered to depose Hitler in return for guarantees that Germany would not be occupied by Russian forces, that Germany could retain enough of an army to insure against civil war, and that she could have the right of economic rehabilitation—all of which might leave enough German militarism to form the nucleus of a new attempt at world conquest.

Germans in London say Rommel's elevation would be a dangerous expedient. He is strictly a Nazi general and his advancement might widen the breach between Hitler and his old Junker generals.

Refugees indicate the Germans are convinced there will be an Allied attack upon Denmark, Norway, and down through the Skagerrak and Kattegat almost any day. That, they say, is one reason Rommel was sent first to Denmark and then to Norway to inspect defenses.

Touted Rocket Gun Reported To Have Flunked Nazi Test

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—Reports here today were that Adolf Hitler's reported long-range rocket gun was tested a few weeks ago along the Baltic coast and that a weapon expected to hurl the projectiles 250 miles proved a miserable failure. Guesses as to the size of the rockets which the Germans would seek to develop have ranged as high as 120 tons.

Any effective shelling of a specific target as far inland as London—about 80 miles from the French coast—is virtually ruled out by most unofficial commentators on grounds of extreme inaccuracy at such a range.

Carrier Planes To Blast Japs

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Rear Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, said tonight carrier based planes would constitute the spearhead of America's westward drive in the central Pacific.

"Through the use of carriers in large numbers we can concentrate in any given area an overwhelming air superiority," he said in a speech prepared for delivery to the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

Agencies Map Work For Idle in Cutback

Small Arms Cut

Munitions Output Gains 3% in Month

By Ben W. Gilbert

Tempered by a sharp cutback in the small arms ammunition program, overall munitions production in November registered a "moderate gain" of 3 per cent over October, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, announced yesterday.

Nelson disclosed that the monthly production index climbed 18 points to 665—about six and two-thirds times the November, 1941, pre-Pearl Harbor rate.

The WPB head's monthly production report contained the following summary picture:

	Per cent.
Aircraft	+6
Ships	+4
Guns	+3
Combat and motor vehicles	+1
Communications and electronic equipment	+6
Ammunition	—2
War construction	—8

The cutback in small arms ammunition accounted for a 13 per cent drop in production last month, Nelson said, but the overall picture registered only a small drop because artillery ammunition gained, and aerial bombs gained 11 per per cent, with production ahead of schedule.

WPB officials explained that the small-arms ammunition cutback could be attributed to the following factors:

1. Downward revision of estimates of the rate at which ammunition is expended, based on actual combat experience.

2. Completion of a substantial portion of the ammunition program destined for our Allies via lend-lease.

3. More efficient use of inventories of already produced ammunition.

Summing up, Nelson said:

"We have reached the peak in some programs; some are moving at about an even keel; some are advancing, and still others are being cut back. It must be remembered that the demands of war, as reflected and proven by battle requirements, change constantly; production, therefore, must follow the trends of the military action.

"In general, problems which were of a major nature some months ago, such as manpower, design changes and material shortages, presented less difficulty in November."

October munitions production had increased 6 per cent over September when no increase was registered over the previous month, emphasizing, Nelson said, "that we are moving toward our peak production."

"As we approach the ceiling, even a modest gain is an achievement and a credit to American industry and labor," Nelson said.

Job Programs Are Planned as War Output Slows

By Ben W. Gilbert

The War Production Board and other Government agencies are readying civilian production programs to take up any slack which may be created by impending war production cutbacks, it was learned yesterday.

As revealed in yesterday's Washington Post, substantial cutbacks—6 to 8 or possibly 10 billion dollars' worth—are expected to be made in 1944 production programs as a result of production reviews now in progress.

Although officials don't expect the letting down of the war program to reach sizeable proportions until the middle of next year, they already are making plans to hold dislocation and resultant unemployment to a minimum.

Among the programs which are receiving most serious consideration are:

1. A broad-scale program to replace worn-out rolling stock—particularly box cars, gondola cars and locomotives. Regarded as a No. 1 must as soon as materials are availablee, the program is expected to consume large quantities of manpower and materials.

2. Expansion of oil wildcatting under the supervision of the Petroleum Administration for War. Quantities of steel for pipeline purposes would be required.

3. Resumption of electrification extension on a wide scale. Stopped by the war, a huge backlog has accumulated.

At the same time a gradual easing up on restrictions on the use of scarce materials may be expected, permitting the resumption of production of many civilian items such as refrigerators, washing machines, vacuum cleaners, etc.

Already under discussion is whether the new civilian production programs can be dropped into place as soon as a military program is removed.

The producers of basic materials such as steel, copper, and aluminum, and representatives of organized labor are urging that immediate steps be taken to make sure that no lag in getting the civilian production under way occurs.

Representatives of the armed services, however, have expressed the fear that too-rapid resumption of civilian production may interfere with the war production program, particularly with respect to manpower. Neutrals agree that some dislocation is inevitable, but are trying to devise ways of holding it to a minimum.

Studies are now being made of the technique to be used in dropping civilian production in to replace war production that has been eliminated.

Among the questions raised are: (1) Should manufacturers in labor shortages areas be allowed to resume the manufacture of civilian items? (2) Should any distinction be made between the manufacturer who has done a good production job and the manufacturer who has fallen behind on his war production schedules?

(3) What about the man who has idle facilities, but no manpower available—should he be allowed to compete with war production for manpower? (4) Should materials be made available to all or should resumed wartime production of civilian items be restricted to those in the business when production was stopped?

RAF Raids France, Western Germany

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—RAF Typhoons bombed unspecified targets in northern France in daylight today, after RAF Mosquitos without a loss lunged through German defenses last night to blast western Germany for the fourth consecutive night.

While the Typhoons were out, coastal command Beaufighters patroling off Norway smashed an enemy flying boat. One of the patrol aircraft was reported missing.

Downey and Ex-Wife's Mate Air Family Row in Night Club

TENOR WINS—Addison (Jack) Randall (left), current husband of Barbara Bennett (center), was knocked down while in an argument with Morton Downey (right) in a New York club Monday night

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Actor Addison (Jack) Randall, husband of Actress Barbara Bennett, took the blame tonight for a flare-up between himself and her former husband, Singer Morton Downey, last night in the El Morocco night club.

His head bandaged from an injury he ascribed to a champagne bottle swung by a third party, Randall said he had gone to Downey's table and "told him off" but that the tenor had not struck him.

Randall said Downey, father of Barbara's five children, had refused to let her see them recently when she was ill, and that his own resentment boiled over when he saw Film Star Joan Bennett, Barbara's sister, in a party at Downey's table.

"Blood is thicker than water; at least it ought to be," Randall asserted. "That's what infuriated me—to see her with him in a public place."

Joan was accompanied by her husband, Walter Wanger, a motion picture executive; Publisher and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, jr., and Marine Capt. and Mrs. Ben Finney, jr.

Their table was near that at which Randall and Barbara were sitting.

Randall went to Downey's table and exchanged hot words, whereupon Downey got up and squared away.

Then, the actor continued, the bottle descended from behind. He woke up at home, in the care of a physician.

Neither Barbara nor Downey had anything to say.

Citizenship for Some Arabs Voted by French in Algiers

Algiers, Dec. 14 (AP).—The French National Committee decided today to grant full French citizenship to Algerian Arabs who can read and write French, and propounded a series of reforms which would answer most of the Arabs' insistent demands for political and economic equality in Algeria.

It added that on recommendation of Georges Catroux, commissioner of state responsible for Moslem affairs, the committee believed these four steps necessary:

1. To confer French citizenship on Moslem "elites," without delay and without abandonment of their personal Koranic status.

2. To increase the Moslem representation in the Algerian deliberative assemblies, and to broaden Moslem rights of suffrage.

3. To make a larger number of administrative posts accessible to Moslems.

4. To execute a complete program, and to fix the ultimate date for its execution.

The committee charged Catroux with drawing up proposals for the execution of these decisions with the help of a special commission.

can republics are at war with the Axis, that six others have broken diplomatic relations with the Axis, and that Argentina alone has failed to act.

He said that the cooperating countries had opened their ports to United States ships, welcomed United States troops and devoted their minds, force and fields to the production of war materials.

"They rounded up Axis spies and saboteurs," Hull continued, "and they shut off trade of benefit to the Axis. They cooperated in the defense of the Panama Canal and in the suppression of the submarine menace."

"The plain truth is," Hull declared, "that without this cooperation the course of the war in highly essential strategic areas might have been different."

Double Security Tax Voted Down

provision to raise the excess profits tax maximum from 90 to 95 per cent.

After agreeing to 95 per cent as the excess profits tax maximum, with retention of the present 80 per cent over-all ceiling with respect to corporate normal, surtax, and excess profits, the Senate committee approved the House provisions on excess profits taxes with only one change, in connection with the invested credits for the purpose of computing excess profits taxes.

Instead of reducing the credit allowance on invested capital in excess of $200,000,000 from 5 to 4 per cent, the Senate committee retained the existing 5 per cent. The other credit reductions approved by the House were as follows: 8 per cent for the first $5,000,000, 6 per cent on $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, 5 per cent on $10,000,000 to $200,000,000.

The House-approved exemption of $100,000 in place of the present $5000 for excess profits tax purpose was retained.

No estimate of the loss of revenue from the change in the credit allowance was offered by the committee, but as the House had estimated that 616 million dollars would be raised by the excess profits tax increases, it was said the loss would be appreciable, this scaling down the Senate committee's present total of $1,922,700,000 against a House-approved over-all of $2,140,000,000.

As the result of the demand of Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic floor leader, that the Kentucky liquor interests be heard further on a proposal to reduce the tax-free period for bonded warehouse liquor, the search for new revenue was delayed, and with it the prospect of Senate consideration of the bill before next week. Senator George was unable, pending the appearances of the Kentucky witnesses, to press his amendment to reduce the legal period from eight to four years, thereby putting an estimated 117 million gallons of liquor into the taxation category at $9 a gallon.

Other major changes agreed upon by the Finance Committee included:

Repeal of the so-called second windfall provision of the current Collection Tax Act of 1943, by which a special rule is imposed where the surtax net income of the taxable year of 1942 or 1943, whichever year has the lowest tax liability, exceeds the highest surtax net income for 1938, 1939, or 1940, plus $10,000. The complications of the rule, plus the probabilities that no great amount of revenue would be obtained from it, prompted the Bureau of Internal Revenue to recommend its elimination.

Adoption of the provision under which a taxpayer who loses money for five consecutive years on a business venture would be allowed no more than $20,000 in each year as a loss deduction from income taxes. The proposal, known colloquially as the "Marshall Field" amendment, was added by the Senate to the Revenue Act of 1942, and thrown out in conference with the House.

How Used Cooking Fats Give You
FREE RED POINTS

WHY YOU GET FREE POINTS: Two red ration points and 4¢ will be given to you by your meat dealer for every pound of used cooking fat you turn in to him. The OPA has authorized this. Why? Because our country urgently needs used cooking fats to make the glycerine essential to battlefield medicines, gunpowder, synthetic rubber and other war essentials.

HOW TO GET THEM: The moment you have saved a can-ful of used cooking fat, take it to your butcher. Please save fats in a tin can—any kind of fruit, soup or vegetable can will do, but not glass. For every pound of fat, your butcher will give you 4¢ and two red points, free—to be used any time, anywhere, to purchase meat, butter or any product requiring red stamps.

HOW TO SAVE FAT: Every drop is needed. It makes no difference how black or burned it is. Every tablespoonful yields crystal-clear glycerine to make 5 machine gun bullets or 73 smallpox inoculations. So scrape your skillets and pans, skim gravies and soups, melt down fat trimmings. Keep a can on the back of the stove to hold the fat. Start saving today. When the can's full, turn it in!

Educators List History Dates For U. S. Youth

Minneapolis, Dec. 14 (AP).—Johnny Schoolboy who always complained he had too many names and dates to remember in American history finally has the educators on his side.

Under recommendations agreed upon by the committee on American history after four months of study and announced today by committee director Edgar B. Wesley of the University of Minnesota, memorization of a lot of dates and names would be eliminated from Johnny's history curriculum.

The recommendations are the committee's answer to the criticism leveled last spring that students didn't know their American history any too well.

For Johnny, the grade student, the committee would compel him to remember only 10 dates—1492, 1519, 1607, 1620, 1763, 1776, 1789, 1803, 1819, 1848.

Only 10 Compulsory Dates

For Johnny, the grade student, the committee would compel him to remember only 10 dates—1492 (Columbus' discovery of America), 1519 (Magellan's trip around world, 1607 (first permaent settlement at Jamestown, Va.), 1620 (landing of Pilgrims), 1763 (Treaty of Paris), 1776 (Declaration of Independence), 1789 (inauguration of Washington), 1803 (Louisiana Purchase), 1819 (first steamboat crossing of Atlantic by Savannah), and 1848 (peace with Mexico).

And he would be expected to know the pertinent facts about Daniel Boone, William Bradford, de Champlain, William Clark, Columbus, Coronado, Cortes, De Soto, Drake, Franklin, Houston, Jefferson, La Salle, Meriwether Lewis, Magellan, Marquette, Penn, John Smith, Washington, Roger Williams, Brigham Young.

In Johnny's junior high school years the committee favors making him remember 1775 (start of Revolutionary War), 1781 (Cornwallis' surrender and Articles of Confederation), 1793 (cotton gin's invention), 1807 (Fulton's steamboat), 1812 (War with Britain), 1820 (Missouri Compromise), 1844 (telegraph), 1861-65 (Civil War), 1869 (transcontinental railroad), and 1876 (Custer massacre).

Individuals to Identify

Of people, he would be expected to know about Samuel Adams, John Jacob Astor, Clara Barton, Alexander Graham Bell, Jefferson Davis, Thomas A. Edison, Cyrus W. Field, Henry Ford, Robert Fulton, Charles Goodyear, Ulysses S. Grant, Nathan Hale, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, James J. Hill, Elias Howe, Andrew Jackson, John Paul Jones, Robert E. Lee, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Cyrus McCormick, Samuel Morse, Thomas Paine, Samuel Slater, Eli Whitney, Orville and Wilbur Wright.

There would only be 12 more dates for Johnny to learn in high school—1619 (introduction of slaves), 1649 (Toleration Act), 1765 (Stamp Act), 1817 (disarmament pact with Canada), 1823 (Monroe Doctrine), 1857 (Dred Scott decision), 1887 (Interstate Commerce Commission), 1898 (Spanish-American War), 1914-18 (World War), 1920 (Nineteenth Amednment), 1933 (New Deal), and 1939 (World War II).

But he would have to learn about 43 additional persons of note, including Samuel Gompers, Stephen A. Douglas, and Francis Parkman, the committee said.

The report, to be published by the Macmillan Co., will be released to the public December 28, Wesley said. The committee was sponsored by the American Historical Association, the Mississippi Valley Historical Association, and the National Council for the Social Studies.

Job Deferments Of Thousands To Be Reviewed

lective Service said, when the registrant's principal place of employment and local board are in the same appeal board area.

The new regulation demands that the file of every registrant who was occupationally deferred in class 2-A or 2-B on or before December 10 be forwarded by January 9 to the appeal board.

An example is that of a man registered in St. Louis and working in Los Angeles. He might have obtained a deferment by mail. Under the new order, the appeal board in Los Angeles has the authority to review his case and make what amounts to an on-the-scene check of the man's actual essentiality.

Local boards, under the new order, are directed to send the file of every registrant classified 2-A or 2-B after December 10 to the proper appeal board within 10 days after the local board's classification.

In cases where an appeal was taken on or before December 15 and no disposition was made of the case prior to that date, the local board or appeal board in possession of the registrant's file will determine his principal place of employment and forward the file there, if it is outside the appeal board area.

The new procedure, Selective Service emphasized, does not interfere with 1-A men's right to appeals through the local board in which they are registered, it was said.

BENNY GOODMAN
gives you his "Pick of the Post" on the newsstands today

HE was a child prodigy at kindergarten age . . . a whiz on the harmonica and star of Chicago's "Penny Whistle League." At six he played his first clarinet with a deep down love of the instrument. Benny kept right on with his studying that was to crown him King of Swing.

Today Benny Goodman tells you he keeps up with things important by keeping up with the Post. Through its pages he reads the authentic, gripping articles on war, straight from the pen of Post correspondents on our fighting fronts. And from Broadway to "Main Street" America is mirrored in the pages of the new Post. Yes . . . The Saturday Evening Post is a habit with Benny Goodman. And here is the King of Swing's choice in this issue.

"SHE startled the editors, this Hollywood glamour girl turned writer. And her sparkling story of the adventures overseas of Kay Francis, Martha Raye, Mitzi Mayfair and herself brought me laughs galore. These four movie queens carried the glamour and nonsense of Hollywood to our fighting boys. Get set for fun, for laughs, for a grand good time in the first of five glorious installments of 'Four Jills in a Jeep' in this new Post."

2. LET'S QUIT PRETENDING
by Demaree Bess

"WHAT'S the real, honest-to-goodness reason for America's part in this war? This No. 1 article gave me a straight answer. Mr. Bess, who knows world politics like an ambassador, tears away the veil of nonsense thrown around our war aims and shows us the realities beneath. A tonic for us all . . . because a real, lasting peace may well depend on our facing facts. One of the most challenging articles I've read in months."

3. JOSIE AND THE DUCK BOAT

"MIX an ogre, a pretty girl and a boy with biceps rushing to the rescue—and you've got a story that always gets 'em. Flavor it with laughs, fun, a nice, big throb in the cardiac regions—as this story has—and only a crank can resist it. Not being a crank, I went for this romance of pretty Josie, who likes to dream things up, and red-headed Sergeant Sullivan, who made those dreams come true. My guess is you will, too."

Larger Ration Urged to Cut Pork Surplus

Maintenance of ration points on pork products in the face of an "oversupply of hogs" has created an emergency in the meat-packing industry, the National Independent Meat Packers Association charged last night as War Food Administration spokesmen promised early action to relieve desperately tight storage warehouse space and to "prevent mass spoilage of Government-held foods."

Too much food for the rationed demand and too little space for the reserves, however badly they may be needed in the future, meantime were causing headaches throughout the country.

In Baltimore, farmers were returning home from market with their cattle rather than accept prices run down by a gutted market. Spinach farmers in the West were reported letting their crops stand because there were no freezer storage facilities available. The efrozen foods industry was at a virtual standstill, and food transportation problems were emultiplying rapidly due to mixed schedules brought on by lack of terminal storage espace.

WFA to Fix Storage Limit

WFA will act, the spokesman said, by adding more items to the list of commodities which cannot be kept in refrigerated storage and placing a time limit on the storage of other items.

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., counsel for the meat packers, said his group believed all ration points—at least on fresh pork—should be canceled for an emergency period of approximately 60 days, to enable the huge supply of pork now on hand to move more freely to the civilian population.

In Philadelphia, La Roe said, the situation is so "desperate" meat actually is spoiling for lack of customers. One carload of pork, he declared, was sent to New York and returned to Philadelphia because the former market was glutted. The load was in bad condition upon its return, he said, and the overworked transportation system had been a sufferer.

"The packers feel," the packers' counsel said "that the ration point system should be sufficiently elastic to adapt itself to the economic needs of the industry." Heretofore, he said, the Government's position has been that to cancel ration points on pork might cause an undue demand for beef and butter—bought with the same stamps.

War food officials said yesterday the cattle situation apparently prevailing in the Baltimore market, and reportedly at other small markets scattered over the country, was not true in the large market centers.

Chief of WLB Makes Appeal For Subsidies

he declared, "has been that Congress was determined to stabilize the prices of things which wage and salary earners buy."

Wage earners and salaried workers have for the first time in the country's history exercised "self-discipline" and foregone the opportunity to urge that the price of their labor rise to its "natural level," in an effort to make stabilization plans work, he declared, expressing belief the subsidy ban would "inevitably renew the tragic race between wages and prices."

Time Growing Short

Whether congressional action can be completed before the Christmas recess still remained in doubt.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, farm bloc leader, declared the Banking Committee had "dilly-dallied" with the question, and that as a result Congress is heading into a year-end legislative jam. This was seen as an indication the subsidy opponent has reconciled himself to the passage of the resolution by Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana deferring a vote until after a reconvening, January 12.

"The bill never should have been referred to a subcommittee in the first place," Bankhead declared. He said he was not implying members in favor of subsidies were deliberately trying to delay a showdown, but that "it is apparent the tax bill is getting first consideration."

The Commodity Credit Corporation, agency expending most of the subsidy money, expires December 31 until some extension is accorded by law.

counsel for the New York Central Railroad, spokesman for the carriers, in support of the August 7 labor-management agreement on an 8-cent flat increase.

But the decision to hear Vinson tomorrow before a committee vote removed any possibility of House consideration until next week. If Speaker Rayburn refuses to entertain a motion to suspend House rules and pass the bill, as now appears likely, the House Rules Committee must clear the measure.

At one stage of the negotiations the brotherhoods suggested a 7 to 10-cent an hour sliding scale compromise, but this was not accepted and was subsequently withdrawn. Vinson set aside the May 24 8-cent award of a presidential emergency board in favor of a second board's recommendation for a 4 to 10-cent sliding scale. This, brotherhood leaders rejected.

On Capitol Hill, Dr. George Calver's precautionary warnings were still posted, while eight Senators were listed as confined to their homes: Aiken, Chavez, D. Worth Clark, Francis Maloney, Richard B. Russell, Shipstead, Wagner and George A. Wilson—five Democrats and three Republicans.

Rate of the growth of the epidemic was indicated in figures released by George St. John Perrott, director of the division of public health methods, United States Public Health Service. Absence reoorts from one Federal agency were: 377, November 22; 448, November 29, and 793, December 6—by December 8 they had mounted to 1015. In another agency: 97, November 22; 121, November 29; 162, December 6.

President's Birthday Ball Planned

Events to celebrate the President's birthday, January 30, by raising funds to combat infantile paralysis as in years past were scheduled yesterday following a meeting of the President's Birthday Ball committee in the office of District Commissioner John Russell Young, general chairman.

Activities will open with a "Mile o' Dimes" campaign on January 15 in front of Loew's Capitol Theater, where citizens will be asked to put dimes on the line in the fight against infantile paralysis. Last year, this feature of the President's birthday campaign netted $40,000 locally.

Other events also will be patterned after those held in former years—a command performance at the National Theater, Sunday, January 23; a reception-dinner for visiting movie stars at the Mayflower Hotel to be followed by midnight shows at the Capitol, Earle, and Howard Theaters, January 28; dances and dinner dances at hotels and the Lincoln Colonnade, and cutting of the birthday cake.

Black Market Blamed in Gas Coupon Thefts

Ration coupons for 138,000,000 gallons of gasoline have been stolen from 173 local war price and rationing boards, Price Administrator Chester Bowles disclosed last night and warned consumers that the black market in gasoline was developing into a major racket.

Bowles announced that United States Secret Service men were called in to work with Office of Price Administration enforcement officials in smashing three big counterfeiting rings in Philadelphia and New York.

In Philadelphia, Bowles said, counterfeit ration stamps representing more than 100,000,000 gallons of gas were uncovered and through the efforts of an honest service station attendant the counterfeiters were arretsed and their plates and presses confiscated.

The OPA Administrator revealed that his agency was employing a new system to "dry up" gasoline black markets from the standpoint of the illegal dealer.

Rigid Check Made

OPA men are now carefully examining distributors' ration banks, checking the coupons turned in by dealers. If coupons are found without the proper license numbers written on their faces, or if they are counterfeit, they are traced to the dealer. His basic supply of gasoline will be reduced by the amount of illegal coupons, Bowles said.

Thus, if a dealer storing 2000 gallons of gas turns in illegal coupons for 500 gallons, his supply will be cut to 1500 gallons. A dealer who continues the illegal practice and is caught by OPA or the Secret Service will thereby drive himself out of business.

Supply Critically Short

The gas supply for civilians is still critically short, Bowles said.

Bowles asked consumers to take three steps to aid OPA's black market drive. They are:

(1) Buy gasoline only with coupons issued by OPA; (2) write State and car license numbers on every coupon possessed; and (3) report to local boards persons who offer to sell coupons and dealers who offer to sell gas without coupons.

Sanders Heads Federal Club

Paul H. Sanders, of the Geological Survey, has been elected president of the Federal Club, it was announced yesterday. Organized some 25 years ago, the club consists of more than 250 scientific, professional and administrative officers of the Federal Government.

Other officers are, George A. Bonnet, first vice president; George P. Barse, second vice president, William R. Price, treasurer, and Charles J. Benner, secretary. Louis H. Fisher and Benjamin E. Jones were elected directors.

WLB to Hold Hearing Tomorrow on D. C. Transit Pay

The National War Labor Board will hold a public hearing on wage increases for employes of the Capital Transit, A. B. & W., and Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach companies at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice president of the board, will preside over the hearing to consider the voluntary wage agreement between the union and Capital Transit and A. B. & W., which would bring the hourly rate for drivers to $1 and 92 cents, respectively.

The most contended issue probably will be the wage dispute between employes of the Arnold-operated bus lines and the company. The union has been asking for an increase of 14 cents an hour, bringing drivers' rates to 95 cents, and the case has been pending since last May.

Although the recommendations of the panel, whose chairman was Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, has not been made public, it has been learned on good authority that the original unanimous decision was revised downward later and now contains a recommendation for a 9 cents increase. The second decision was not indorsed by the labor member, it was understood.

OPA Moves To Cut Quota Of New Autos

The Office of Price Administration moved yesterday to reduce the number of applicants for the dwindling number of new automobiles in dealers' hands.

OPA made salesmen ineligible for the new vehicles and at the same time raised from 40,000 to 60,000 the minimum number of miles an applicant's car must be driven before it can be considered unserviceable.

The new restrictions, effective December 20, are expected to cut down the number of autos rationed by local boards this month. The December quota of new passenger cars, announced 15 days ago, is only 15,500 vehicles—the lowest quota in almost two years of rationing.

Becaue no new autos have been manufactured since early in 1942, their number has been gradually reduced and it is now necessary to limit more and more the eligibility classifications, OPA said.

The move taking salesmen off the eligible list, follows closely OPA's action removing them from the preferred mileage list for obtaining supplemental gasoline rations.

Previously, salesmen of foods, building materials, clothing, and fuel and medical supplies could purchase new cars if they drove an average of 723 miles or more per month in connection with their work last year.

The District of Columbia new car quota for December has been set at 84 vehicles.

House Group Seeks Funds to Fight Ousted Men's Suits

By Mary Spargo

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday unanimously directed preparation of a resolution authorizing funds for the House to employ its own counsel in a suit against the Government.

Rarely in the history of the United States has Congress, reluctant to be represented by the Attorney General, employed its own counsel, and then only when the executive and legislative branches were completely at loggerheads on an issue.

Toward the end of their tenure of office both President Wilson and President Hoover met similar situations.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri said the subcommittee headed by Representative Kerr (Democrat) of North Carolina had been directed to prepare and submit to the full committee such a resolution at the earliest possible moment.

The situation developed from a suit filed in the Court of Claims here by Robert Morss Lovett, executive assistant to the Governor of the Virgin Islands; Goodwin B. Watson and William E. Dodd, jr., both of the Federal Communications Commission.

The three, discharged as a result of a rider on the urgen deficiency bill initiated by the Appropriations Committee, were permitted to remain at their desks for a week to test the legality of congressional action by bringing a suit for the week's back salary.

In a message to Congress President Roosevelt held that the action was unconstitutional but failed to veto the bill. The pay of thousands of District and Federal workers had been held up for weeks by the bitter debate on the issue.

The same position was taken by Attorney General Francis Biddle so that when the three filed their suits the Attorney General was asked for and gave his consent to the employment of special congressional counsel.

The test of the constitutionality of the rider, which boils down in essence to just how far congressional control of the purse strings may be carried, is expected to be brought eventually to the Supreme Court.

W. J. Patterson to Serve As ICC Head Next Year

W. J. Patterson, who went to work for the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1914 as a safety appliance inspector, will serve as its chairman during 1944.

The commission yesterday announced Patterson's election under its system of rotating the chairmanship. John L. Rogers, who was next in line by seniority, was unable to accept the chairmanship because of his duties as assistant director of the Office of Defense Transportation.

Julia says— Here are some real time-savers
AND THIS is certainly a time for saving minutes and hours, what with everyone being busier than ever with war work, not to mention the close approach of Christmas and all that it means.
I've had that time-saving idea in mind, myself, for quite a while now—and I've planned a few time-saving menus which I'll pass along because they have worked well for me.
Perhaps they will give you some good thoughts about simplifying your plans for nutritious meals during these crowded days. Why not try one of these
EASY TO PREPARE MENU IDEAS

Cut in squares to serve. Bake remaining dough as biscuits.

OWI Fears Coal Catastrophe Unless Output Is Increased

The Office of War Information reported yesterday the coal shortage is so acute that if stocks cannot be replenished next summer the situation will "approach catastrophe."

The plain fact is, says OWI, that we aren't digging as much coal as we are using. Therefore we have had a progressive shortage throughout 1943. Stockpiles in the bins of industrial users and retail dealers will have declined from 86 million tons last January 1 to about 60 million tons at the end of the year.

That is only a little more than a month's supply. By March 31 the stocks will be considerably less than a month's supply—"a dangerously low level," OWI said.

Though it is a "delayed shortage," in that it draws on stockpiles, the cold hand of the situation is laid directly on the consumer "under the stress and dislocation of distribution."

It is the difficulty of distrubuting an inadequate amount of coal equitably that makes it tougher on the consumer than production estimates indicate, the report said, adding:

"A surplus of one kind of coal in southern Illinois will not offset a shortage of another kind of coal in Pennsylvania."

Enough Coal for Everybody

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—There's enough coal for everybody, the bituminous coal institute and the anthracite institute insisted today.

Power Challenged

FEPC Issue Seen Headed For President

By the Associated Press

A major controversy over the authority of the Fair Employment Practices Committee to order equality of treatment for Negro war workers yesterday appeared certain to be dumped on President Roosevelt's desk when he returns to the Capital.

FEPC orders to end alleged discrimination against Negroes have been challenged by Southern Railroads, and others, on the ground that FEPC exceeded its powers.

Meanwhile, members of Congress, the courts and the War Labor Board all were involved in the day's developments as one strike by white workers got under way in a vital war factory.

Orders Strike Ended

The War Labor Board, by unanimous action, ordered white strikers at the Point Breeze Western Electric plant in Baltimore to return to work at once or face "all possible action" under the War Labor Disputes Act. Point Breeze workers voted to strike Monday night in protest against the use of washroom facilities in common with Negro workers.

The strike was called after WLB refused to order separate facilities. On October 2, FEPC advised the Western Electric Co. that the discontinuance of common facilities for Negro and white employes of the Western Electric Point Breeze plants and the introduction of special facilities would be a backward step which can but lead to discrimination against Negroes."

Other developments included:

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor) of New York praised the FEPC and criticized 16 Southern railroads which defied an FEPC order to cease alleged discrimination against Negro railway workers.

Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi declared that FEPC was a "rump organization" which was creating unnecessary racial tensions in the South.

Issue in California

The Federal District Court for Northern California at San Francisco had before it a case involving Negro workers in which the constitutional authority of the FEPC to order discrimination ended was a collateral issue.

In the California case, 18 Negro shipyard workers petitioned Federal Judge Michael J. Roche for a permanent injunction restraining the Marinship Corp. from discharging them for failure to pay dues to an auxiliary Negro union of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers (AFL).

The boilermakers union was ordered Monday by FEPC to dissolve its auxiliary local unions for Negroes and to receive shipyard workers into full membership.

Fireman Held In Still Case Is Suspended

The suspension without pay of a District fireman, Manford Hugh Dagenett, recommended by Stephen T. Porter, chief engineer of the Fire Deparement, was approved by the District Commissioners yesterday and became effective immediately.

Dagnett, lessee of the building in which a still was found by police Monday night, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham Turnage yesterday on a charge of violating the Internal Revenue Liquor Law. Pleading not guilty, he was released under $1500 bond and the case was continued until December 28.

Dagnett was arrested by the police following the raid after they found no one in the building at 637 L st. se. He told police that he had leased the property in 1923, but denied that he knew anything about the still. He said he had subleased the building.

Equipment able to produce 80 gallons of whisky daily was found on the premises, among it a 75-gallon capacity still, 20 five-gallon tin cans and three high-pressure gasoline burners, all of which were confiscated and turned over to the police property clerk.

Banneker Center Funds Increased

A $4200 increase in Federal funds for operation of the Banneker Center for Negro servicemen was approved yesterday by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator.

The action, which provided an increase from $9700 to $13,911 to care for additional demands on facilities, also extended the period of operation to September 14, 1944. Recreation Services, Inc., applicant for the funds, will contribute $14,431 to the center during the year.

OPA Hires 500 to Probe Price Trends at Wholesale Level

Price Administrator Chester Bowles yesterday announced the hiring of 500 special investigators to work at wholesale and manufacturing levels in a move to nip price violation tendencies before they are well under way and thus "take some of the pressure off retailers."

A great many complaints against violations have come into OPA recently from business groups, Bowles told the Women's National Press Club. Terming this "a turn in the trend," he said the 500 working at the top and with the cooperation of these interested groups could accomplish much more than a similar number of investigators at the retail level.

Funds for the increased staff have ben obtained from economies in national OPA offices, where savings totaling four million dollars have been effected in recent months, the price administrator said.

Heretofore, Bowles said, OPA has had 2300 investigators or "three-fourths of a person for each county in the country." In addition to being small in numbers, the investigating staff has had no right to purchase evidence with which to document their findings.

"So far as I can learn they're the only group of Federal investigators without this right," he declared.

Bowles talked off the record on the subsidy issue now before Congress and the influence of pressure groups on the Government. Representative Winifred Stanley (Republican), from New York, a guest at the luncheon meeting, declared later, "If I had heard you first I would not have voted against subsidies."

New York, Dec. 14 (INS).—A 26 year-old woman employed as assistant chief clerk in a Yonkers draft board, admitted today that she used her job to keep her fiance, now her husband, out of the Army by repeatedly destroying his Selective Service files.

She is Mrs. Carmela Topazio, who three times stole the files of her childhood sweetheart, Joseph J. Topazio, 24. She married him last month.

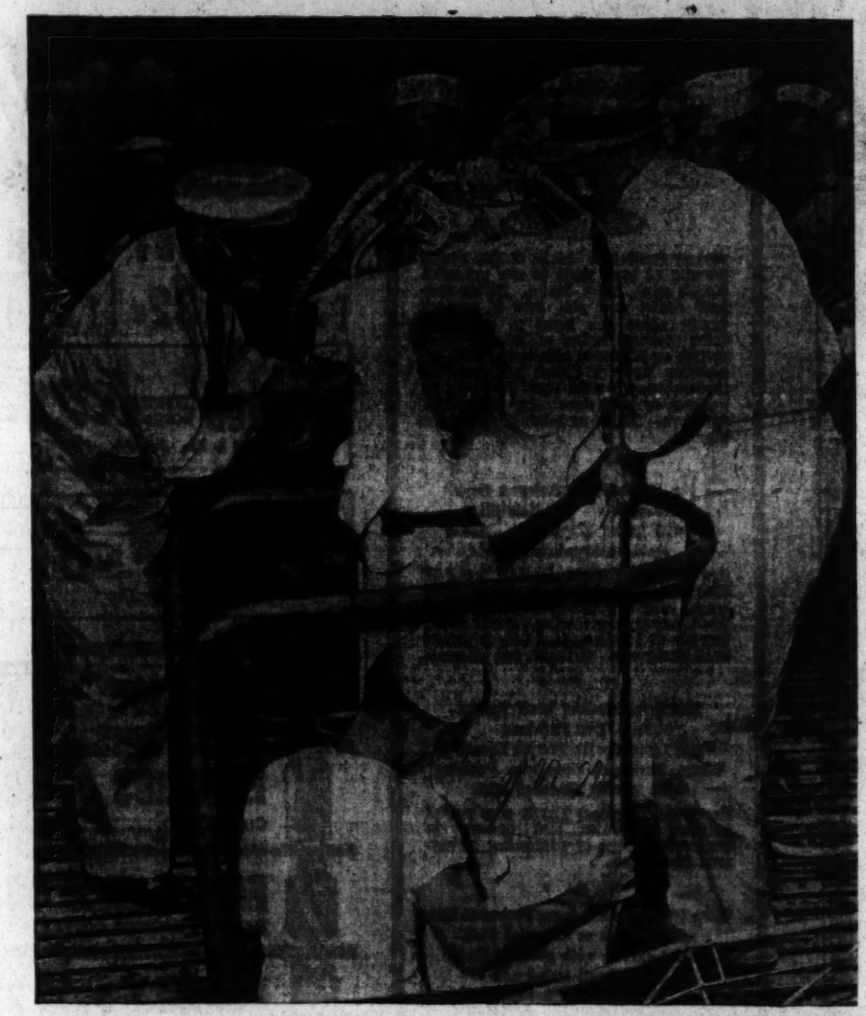
WHEN JOHNNY COMES MARCHING HOME—



but there are shameful inadequacies bringing tragic consequences to many American homes.

The need for a complete, nation-wide veterans' rehabilitation service is a challenge to every legislator, to every thinking American. Action cannot await the war's end or bow to political maneuvering. Now is the time for Washington to (1) Unify existing veterans' laws; (2) Simplify procedure for prompt attention and proper care of all cases; (3) Provide adequate rehabilitation facilities and centralized direction through legislation so comprehensive as to assure that no serviceman is neglected.

The power to act lies in Washington . . . but it is up to you and your neighbors to create in your community a demand for prompt action.

What They Say . . .

"I consider this one of the prime subjects for consideration of the present Congress . . . the field of rehabilitation must be greatly broadened and extended."
Frank B. Keefe, M. C.
Representative From Wisconsin

"We owe a debt that we cannot repay . . . These men should never be allowed to feel that we have in any way forgotten our obligations to them."
E. G. Rohrbough,
Representative From West Virginia

"Proper care and rehabilitation of our war casualties is a sacred obligation of the nation. Thanks to efforts like these we may hope that never again, with respect to such casualties, will it be said that this democracy is lacking in gratitude."
Leo T. Crowley, Director,
Office Economic Warfare

THOUSANDS of America's fighting men are returning home—but many are not marching. They come on stretchers and crutches . . . the grim toll of gun-swept beaches, flaming ships and death-riddled jungles.

Medical science is performing miracles in rebuilding broken bodies and shattered nerves. But doctors cannot answer the silent questioning in the eyes of men wondering what the future holds for them. How can they overcome their new handicaps? Will they be fit for their former jobs? Can they be taught new vocations? What about financial help . . . and education to make up for lost years?

Today, in many homes and hospitals, men who have carried the greatest burdens of the war are troubled by these uncertainties. While they fought to assure America's future, we at home have neglected theirs by failing to create an adequate program of rehabilitation.

Our duty is clear . . . we must provide every serviceman with whatever he needs to return to useful civilian life. America has the best of intentions to fulfill this vital obligation . . . but we are failing in our duty every day!

AMERICA FACES A CHALLENGE!

Rehabilitation is not only a post-war problem. Thousands of casualties are with us now . . . they need help now . . . and the number is increasing daily! Dozens of federal and state agencies are tackling the job,

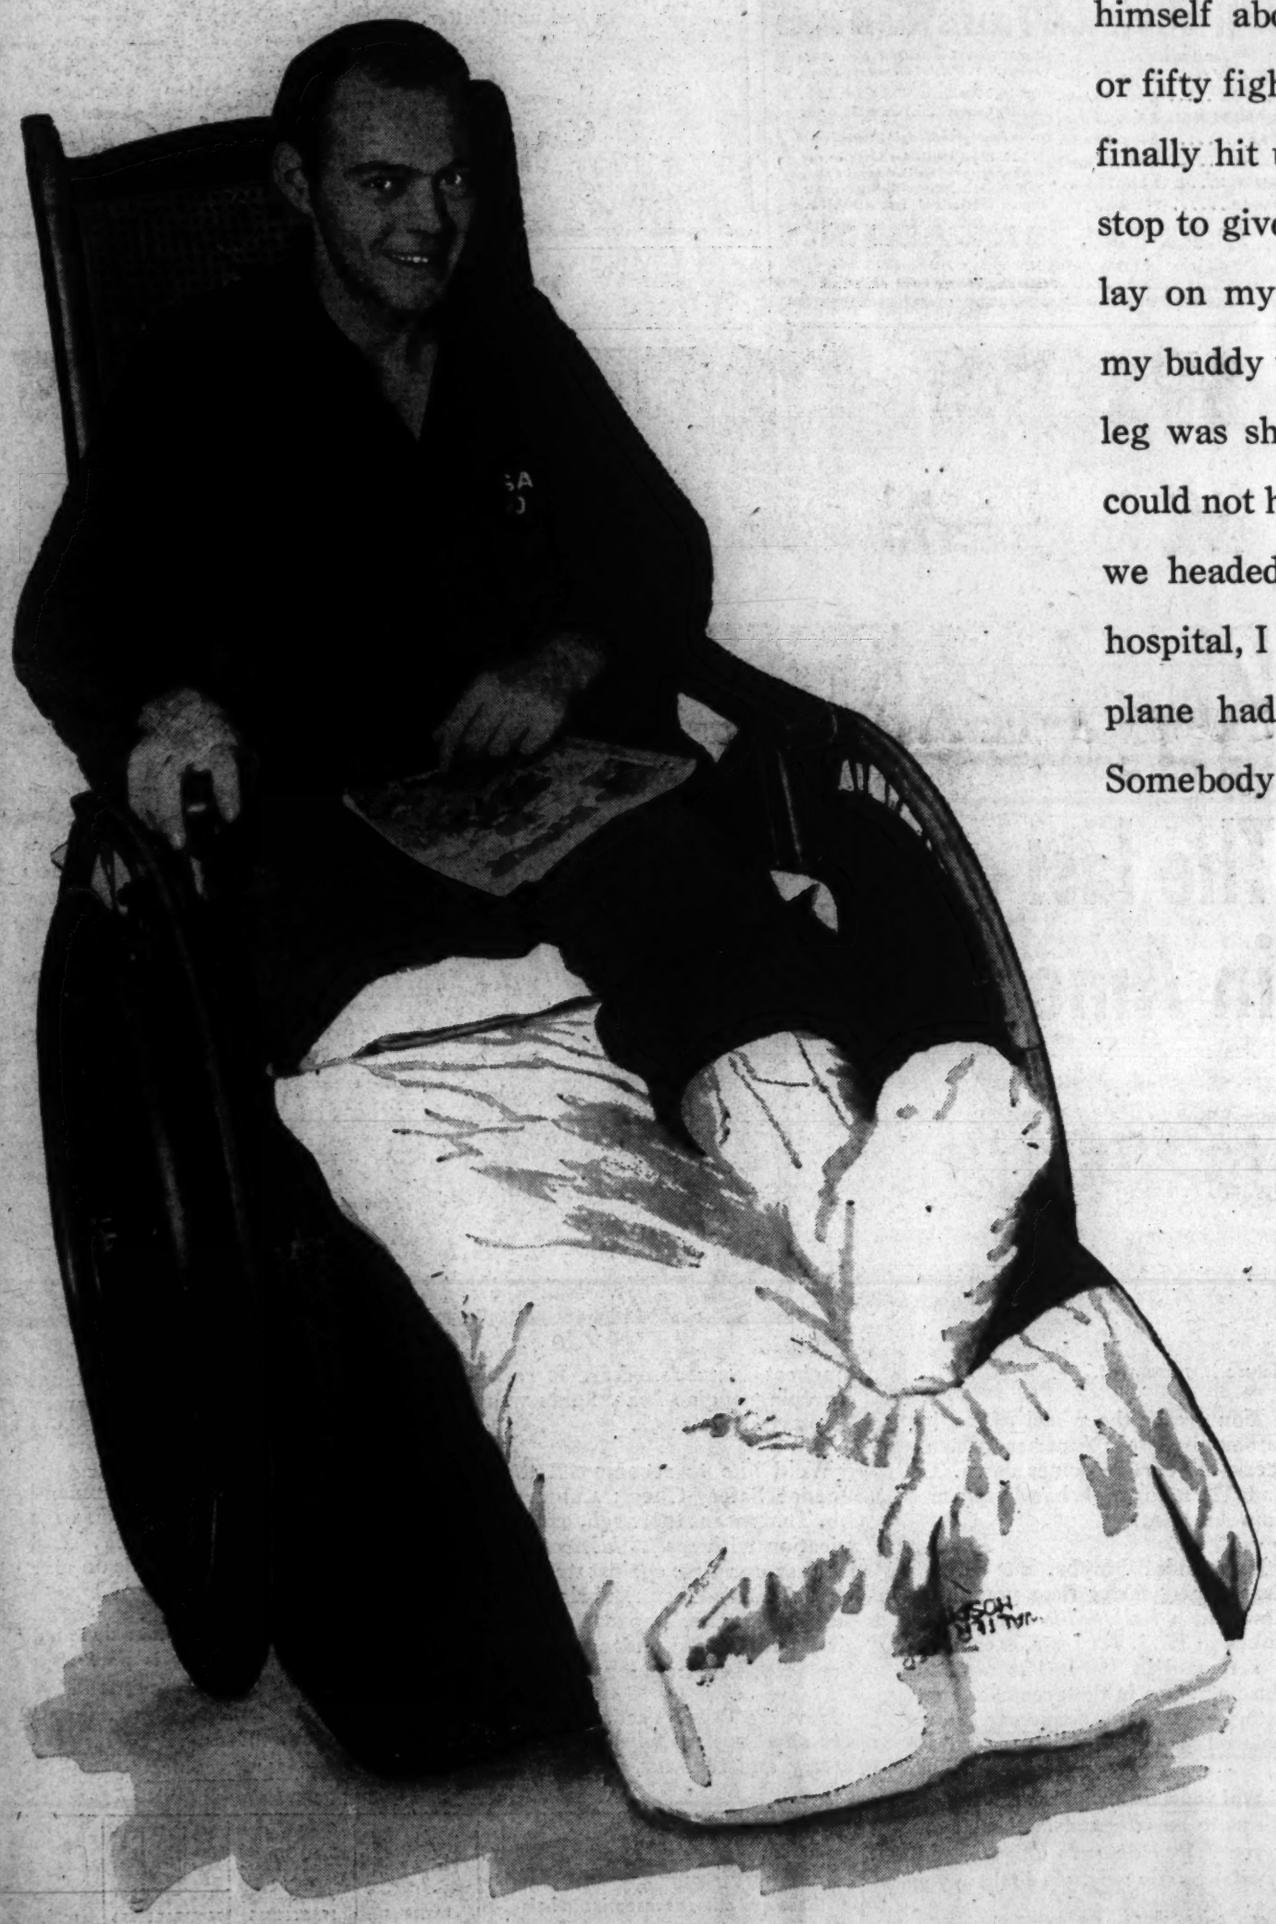
Somebody's Blood was Waiting for Me!



Today Staff Sergeant Shivley sits in a wheel chair. A few months ago he was the aerial gunner in a plane, 24,000 feet over Italy. But let him tell you himself about his 32nd—and last—mission. "Forty or fifty fighters jumped us that day. An enemy shell finally hit us. For the next 15 minutes nobody could stop to give me first aid. Although badly wounded I lay on my back, looking out the window, warning my buddy when I saw a fighter closing in. My right leg was shot off; my left boot was full of blood. I could not have had much left. Mission accomplished, we headed home. Three hours later in a Sicilian hospital, I got three pints of Red Cross Plasma. Our plane had radioed and they were ready for me. Somebody's blood was waiting for me, too.

Now I'll give it back ...I just wanted to borrow it for a little while."

Sergeant Shivley's moving testimonial is proof of what Blood Plasma is doing. It is more than that. It is a challenge to everyone who reads these words. Have you donated a pint of your blood yet? Did you make one donation . . . and then forget all about the continuing need for blood? Can you spare 45 minutes to save a life? Of course, you can. Call the Red Cross for an appointment and let nothing interfere with your keeping that appointment. The number is DIstrict 3300.

The present epidemic of colds and influenza has caused hundreds of cancellations from patriotic blood donors who had made definite appointments. If you have escaped this epidemic or have not recently suffered from colds, please call DIstrict 3300 immediately and make an appointment.

THE NEED IS EXTREMELY URGENT!

Receivership Eases Plight Of 60 Tenants

Sixty or more tenants of the Town Club, who were left in the cold Monday when the manager of the boarding house filed a bankruptcy petition, were temporarily assured of their homes yesterday with the appointment of a receiver for the business.

Samuel B. Block, Washington attorney, named receiver by Fred J. Eden, referee in bankruptcy, immediately arranged for supplies of oil and coal to heat the two residences at 1800 Massachusetts ave. nw. for the coming week. He also assured tenants that gas and electricity services would continue, and said the telephone, disconnected Monday, might be reinstalled.

The boarding-house business, apart from the ownership of the property, will be sold at public auction next week, Block said. He indicated that the business is currently being appraised.

Meanwhile, before tenants had been notified of the receivership appointment, they complained early yesterday to the D. C. Health Department that they might be deprived of [illegible] and light. An inspector was dispatched to investigate conditions at the boarding house and will report today.

Members of the group didn't learn until Monday that their manager, Leon I. Maxson, had filed bankruptcy papers in District Court and left them in possession of the Town Club. Facing possible loss of their rooms, a few moved. Several of the servants, who said they hadn't been paid for two weeks, also disappeared, and meals are no longer being served.

The Washington Restaurant Association, meantime, posted a notice to the tenants, promising rooms for all those who desired new accommodations.

Fewer Sales Laid to Toys Of Cardboard

Cardboard toys that just wouldn't hold up under the caress of junior's fists are partly responsible for the drop this year in Christmas toy buying in the larger department stores, according to sales managers interviewed.

Other factors contributing to the generally lessened sales volume—even though they apparently haven't affected business in the smaller shops—are the current flu and grip epidemic, "which keeps sales people as well as customers away," wartime shortages of merchandise and the city-wide spree of early Christmas shopping which kept business at a peak in October and November and early this month.

There are shortages of nearly everything that usually sells well during Christmas shopping, one department store manager said. No dolls or electric trains can be had. "And so many toys are made of wood or cardboard," he complained, "they don't move."

Crowds continue heavy, nonetheless; although they have been noticeably larger in the stores catering to lower-income customers.

And the small, independent retail stores have been so swamped with shoppers that, despite the drop in buying in many department stores, according to the Washington Board of Trade, the general sales volume for Washington can be said to have increased "considerably" over last year's.

Meanwhile, the worst shortage thus far in boxes of cigars and cartons of cigarettes is restricting Christmas shoppers to the extent that in many cases no more than one box or carton will be sold to a customer.

If substitution helps, however, the National Association of Tobacco Distributors reports that there are ample stocks of pipe tobacco available.

Milhaud Ill, Kindler to Conduct

Illness has forced Darius Milhaud, French modernist composer, to cancel his scheduled appearance as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall tonight. Dr. Hans Kindler will conduct the entire program.

At the same time the orchestra's manager, J. E. Mutch, announced that the student concert set for Central High School Thursday has been postponed until after the first of the year. Absenteeism because of influenza led to the action, it was said.

Victory Sidelights

Man Is Held For Illegal Hosiery Sales

Charged with selling black market nylon hose, Jack Feiffer, 36, was placed yesterday under $1000 bond for a jury trial on January 3 in Municipal Court.

Police said Feiffer, who resided at 2901 18th st. nw., made his contacts in a beauty parlor where he was employed. The stockings, a variety which OPA said were worth only $1.85, were sold by him, police said, for $6.50 a pair to Policeman Pearl Pythian.

Meanwhile, police and the OPA are checking other evidences of a black market in the hose which aren't for sale on the open market here.

Final Instructions

Final instructions in the paper salvage campaign to bring in contributions from hitherto untapped sources went out yesterday to Washington Boy Scouts and Cubs, designated solicitors and collectors for the drive.

D. C. Salvage Committee officials, who are sponsoring the program in cooperation with The Washington Post, meanwhile asked Scouts to set up accumulation depots immediately in order to assure first collections on Saturday.

Carlsson Death Notice Is Year Late

Newspapers just a year ago today were too preoccupied with stories of Rommel's flight across North Africa to take much notice of the passing of Carl Augustus Carlsson, for 41 years a resident of the Capital.

And his widow, only survivor, was so broken at the time of his death that she never thought of looking among the obituaries to see if he was mentioned. Months later, a friend told her there had been a notice in The Post. She made the trip from her home at 803 D st. ne. to buy two copies—but the paid death notice, inserted by the funeral home, was the only obituary.

So Mrs. Carlsson, waited until yesterday—eve of the first anniversary of his passing—to see if The Post would carry a piece about him. She was willing to pay for it, if necessary.

She told a reporter about Mr. Carlsson—that he is buried in Arlington National Cemetery, because he was a chief boatswain's mate in the Navy during World War I; that they were married just three months short of 50 years; that he was the holder of a Congressional Life-saving Medal.

She said, too, that he was a member of Hiram Lodge 10 and Mount Vernon Chapter No. 3, and that he was a 32d degree Mason and an honorary member of the Retired Metropolitan Police Association.

The last car in America

Picture it a moment.

You are at the wheel of the last automobile left in America. When it goes—the curtain comes down. The End. The automobile has disappeared from America.

Impossible? Maybe. But cars are disappearing faster than you think. One and a half million cars were junked in 1943. Two million cars will be scrapped in 1944. The need for transportation is the greatest in our history—yet not a single car can be replaced from the production line.

Will yours be one of the two million cars to be scrapped in the coming year? That depends on you—and what you do now. And mister, you can do plenty!

We'd like to be specific. We'd like to recommend, for one thing, that you use Veedol Motor Oil. It's made from 100% Pennsylvania crude—the toughest Nature makes. It resists scorching engine heat, fights wear, keeps vital parts safe.

We'd like to recommend too, a Veedol Safety-Check Lubrication Job. That means thorough, expert lubrication with special lubricants that act as armor plate against wear. And Veedol Safety-Check Lubrication includes a free check-up on the 18 danger points in and under your car—the places where trouble usually starts.

Have the Tydol-Veedol Service expert also look to wheel alignment, battery and radiator, brake adjustment, tire pressure, tire switching, the need for tire recapping—every important step that can help prolong the life of your car.

But what we'd like to recommend most of all—has nothing to do with us, or the products we sell. And that's an attitude. An attitude on your part that says:

"This car means a lot, not only to me—but to America. It is part of a national asset—the mileage still left to America. It must be kept rolling." An attitude that says: "I'll care for my car—for my country!"

Your TYDOL-VEEDOL dealer has these and other accessories to help you keep your car rolling better—longer—more economically:

Dr. Broughton Dies; Funeral Rites Today

Funeral services for Dr. Levin Bowland Broughton, 57, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Maryland and a nationally known chemist, who died at his home at 7406 Dartmouth ave., College Park, Md., early yesterday, are to be held this afternoon.

The Rev. Nathaniel Acton will officiate at the services at 2 p. m. in St. Andrew's Episcopal Chapel at College Park and burial will be in the Beltsville (Md.) Cemetery.

Dr. Broughton, who had been in the service of the university since his graduation there in 1908, became ill in his office Monday morning. He went home where his condition became worse and he succubed from a heart ailment.

A native of Pokomoke City, Md., Dr. Broughton was graduated from the university in the same class with Dr. H. C. Byrd, now president of the university. He received his master's degree at Maryland in 1911 and his doctorate in philosophy at Ohio State University. He also took advanced courses at George Washington University in Washington and at Johns Hopkins University.

He later returned to Maryland where he became an instructor and assistant professor of chemistry and later assistant chemist of the Maryland Experiment Station. He became head of the chemistry department and State chemist in 1937. At the same time he succeeded Dr. Thomas H. Taliaferro as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. At the time of his death he also was director of athletics.

Dr. Broughton was a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity; Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholastic; Sigma Xi, scientific; Alpha Chi Sigma, honorary chemical; American Chemical Society, Association of Agricultural Chemists, of which he was past president, and was recently appointed a commissioner of the State Department of Geology, Mining and Water Resources, and the Rotary Club.

Dr. Broughton was an Episcopalian.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Laurese McDonell Broughton; a daughter, Mrs. W. L. Etienne of Berwyn, and a son, Barnett Broughton, a cadet at West Point.

Prof. Charles Henry Hawes, Anthropologist, Dead at 76

Prof. Charles Henry Hawes, anthropologist and former associate director of the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston, Mass., died early Monday at his home, 2 Belfield rd., Belle Haven, near Alexandria. He was 76.

Born in New Southgate, Middlesex, England, September 30, 1867, Professor Hawes was in business for several years, later studying at Trinity College, Cambridge University, in England, where he received his bachelor of arts degree in 1899 and his master of arts degree in 1902. As a post graduate student he also did social and educational work in London.

Following his marriage he settled in the United States and taught at the University of Wisconsin from 1907 to 1909 and at Dartmouth College from 1910 to 1917. He returned to England for civilian war service from 1917 to 1919, and was next called back to the United States to become assistant director of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, holding the post from 1919 to 1924. From 1924 to 1934 he was associate director.

Following his retirement he came to Alexandria in 1937 and until the time of his death worked on anthropological data he had gathered in Crete. Mrs. Hawes said that his collection and notes will be presented to Cambridge University.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Boyd Hawes of 3204 Reservoir rd. nw., Georgetown, and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Nesbit Allsebrook, wife of Colin Allsebrook, who lives with her husband in Wargrave-on-Thames, England.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at St. John's Episcopal Church near the Museum of Arts in Boston and burial will be in Boston. Arrangements are being made by Joseph Gawler & Sons, funeral directors of Washington.

Marvin McIntyre

To countless thousands here in Washington and throughout the Nation the news of the death of Marvin McIntyre will produce a feeling of deep personal loss. For more than ten years, that is since the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration, Mr. McIntyre had served as secretary to the President. His particular assignment had to do with the arrangement of appointments with the Chief Executive. This task Mr. McIntyre carried out with unfailing good nature, great diplomatic skill, and deep devotion to his chief, whom he had previously served as business manager and publicity chief during the campaign of 1932. In poor health for years, Mr. McIntyre's sense of duty kept him at his post long after it had become necessary for him to go under a doctor's care. He will be greatly missed at the White House.

Federal Ballot

Carter Glass sees no conflict between the rights of the States and the rights of men and women serving their country in uniform. Speaking of the Green-Lucas soldier vote bill, Senator Glass declares, "I cannot see that the rights of the States are either jeopardized or in any way involved in the present controversy." But the Senate rejected this bill, substituting for it the Eastland-McKellar-McClellan bill which safeguarded States' rights so zealously that it gave no more than lip service to its expressed purpose—enabling servicemen to cast their ballots next year.

As a practical matter, taking into account the elements of time and distance involved in planetary warfare, the inescapable fact is that the States cannot put ballots into the hands of all servicemen without assistance from the Federal Government. Either through their Representatives in Congress or through their several legislatures at home, they must authorize the Federal Government to print ballots for them and to waive some of their customary formalities of registration. It was the former course which the Senate turned down. The alternative, therefore, is for the 48 States to act independently, requesting Federal intervention. Obviously this is a solution which can be made effective only through vigorous, determined efforts on the part of those Senators who assert that they want to give voting opportunities to the people in uniform. They cannot accomplish the purpose by mere pious resolution, as we have already insisted.

The House still has to vote on the soldier ballot. It may take a broader view than the Senate did. For the issue in the upper chamber was obscured by sectional jealousy and political suspicion. The House would do well to bear in mind that the enfranchisement of 10 million citizens is no negligible obligation. Its job must be not to find reasons for dodging the obligation but rather to find means by which to meet it effectively.

Report On A 'Report'

Senator McKellar treated the Senate on Monday to a strip-tease performance—not of himself, but of a colleague. Rarely has such a public undressing been witnessed on the floor of the Senate as that which he administered to the Hon. Hugh A. Butler of Nebraska. The "report" in which Senator Butler had clothed his account of his "mission" to South America was shredded to confetti.

Senator McKellar did this by the elementary reportorial device of digging out some facts and figures. It was not very difficult to do. Indeed, he did it in much less time and at much less expense than were entailed in his colleague's aeronautical jaunt through 20 countries in 55 days. He simply studied the records of the several executive agencies authorized to do business with the other republics of this hemisphere—found out just how much money they had expended and what they had gotten in return for it.

He found out that their total expenditures and cash loans for the past three years amounted to about one and one-half billion dollars. Slightly more than one billion dollars of this was paid out for strategic materials and ships. The balance, $324,185,000, covers all the expenditures which Senator Butler estimated at 6 billion to 8 billion dollars and which he characterized as "boondoggling." As a matter of fact, this 324 million dollars was spent for lend-lease (a good deal of which will be returned), for airports and military and naval facilities, for the protection of the Panama Canal and for essential sanitation around our Latin-American bases.

Senator Butler could have gotten these figures himself. He did not seek them. But far more serious than his statistical aberrations were his reflections on the good faith of our good neighbors and of our own policy toward them. According to Senator Butler we are despised and hated among the Latin-American republicans as a result of our cooperation with them. One concrete answer to this fabrication was given the other day by Brazil. The Brazilians intend to send an expeditionary force to fight by the side of their fellow Americans in Europe. All of our neighbors, with but a single exception, have contributed in accordance with their abilities to the overthrow of the Axis. Senator Butler closed his eyes to this transcendent fact. It is impossible to escape the conclusion that he missed the truth because he did not wish to see it.

War Profiteers

Evidence of the "right-wing reaction" on the part of business against which Charles E. Wilson inveighed in a recent speech may be cited right here in Washington. We offer the action taken Monday by the Senate Finance Committee on the tax bill. The committee, responding to business pressure, decided to "liberalize" the law providing for the renegotiation of war contracts. But the dose of liberalization was big enough to kill the entire renegotiation process.

Three changes were adopted which warrant that statement. The committee decided to permit reopening in the Court of Claims of all renegotiation settlements, to require the War and Navy Departments to consider estimated Federal and local taxes before fixing renegotiation profits and to exempt from renegotiation firms making what are called "standard commercial commodities." The first change opens the door of the Court of Claims to every war contractor who has had to refund some of his profits as a result of renegotiation with the armed services. Why should not the businessman have access to a judicial review of settlements attained before an administrative tribunal? This provision seems fair enough till you hear why the House Ways and Means Committee refused to consider it. That committee, with more sense of responsibility, knew that the Court of Claims would be bogged down by such a burden. In that event there would be no decision for years on refunds of excess profits which had been agreed upon by the renegotiation parties.

Accordingly, the House committee decided that only "impasse" cases should be remitted to the Court of Claims. These cases are those in which a firm under renegotiation takes issue with the administrative decisions. There are only a few of them. Both at the War and at the Navy Departments the renegotiation tribunals are staffed by businessmen of the highest standing and integrity. And the decisions in the great majority of cases they have handed down have been accepted by the war contractors concerned. Maybe these latter would not take advantage of the Senate committee's decision to throw open the Court of Claims to all. But there is no such guaranty. If a firm finds subsequent renegotiation in other cases too lenient, it would clearly be tempted to seek judicial review of its own settlement.

The Senate committee voted for inflation when it decided that renegotiation should be based upon profits after taxes had been calculated. This is the final acknowledgment that neither in the letting of contracts nor in their renegotiation are prices scrutinized. Prices over much of the war business are more or less arbitrary, which means that they are too high. It is left to the renegotiators theoretically to reduce those prices by reducing the profits which have resulted from the war contracts. But the process leaves a good deal of profiteering untouched. What happens in the intervening stage is that the war contractor, in order to justify the high contract prices, is under temptation to pad his costs so that only the minimum of profits will have to be refunded. Not all contractors, of course, do this. But that many of them pad their costs is shown by any number of developments—the strange anxiety of employers to raise wages, labor hoarding, accumulation of materials, big expense accounts, bloated salaries.

The source of inflation lies in this more or less arbitrary way of letting contracts. For it is these inflated costs that make up the bulk of the spending stream which is constantly pressing upon the limited market for civilian goods. They are spent as wages, expenses, competitive prices for materials. Now, with the Senate committee's blessing, contractors would be able to add their taxes to their inflated costs before submitting themselves to the renegotiation boards. They would be enabled, in other words, to go to the renegotiators with all their costs taken for granted. For it would be literally impossible to figure out proper prices when the tax burden varies from one manufacturer to another. We have heretofore suggested that a paring of costs rather than a recognition of costs is the prime job of those in charge of procurement and renegotiation. Cost analyses should be required before prices should be okayed in the war contracts. Then the water could be squeezed out of them. With prices so held down, and with renegotiation aimed at getting refunds beyond a reasonable rate on capital, business could then be acquitted of any war profiteering.

The final bit of foolishness to be perpetrated by the Senate committee was the exemption from the renegotiation process of the makers of "standard commercial commodities." Presumably what is meant is any commodity which is used by the peacetime consumer. The latter uses small motors, textile goods, hand tools, and thousands of other things. Should the makers of these escape renegotiation? Such an exemption would completely frustrate the intent of the renegotiation law, which was to prevent profiteering on all business having anything to do with war. It is difficult to think of any "standard commercial commodities" to which war profits don't adhere. Profits on hand tools and small motors, for instance, have been as great as in what might be called pure munitions.

The Senate committee did not define what a standard commercial commodity is. That would be so much of a headache in itself that one can only think that the Senate committee simply resigned its function as a group of responsible men and underwrote the provision at the behest of interested groups. As to these, they ought to turn to Mr. Wilson's address before the NAM. "This above all," he said, "is a time when the industrial leaders owe it to their country and to themselves to exercise temperate judgment." Do they want to be certified as war profiteers when the fighting men return?

Kiev Bulge

The Red Army's seizure of the initiative on the Eastern Front is an event of signal importance. The region west of Kiev has been the scene of extremely bitter fighting since the Reds captured the Ukrainian capital. They managed to exploit their successes in the Dnieper Valley by pushing ahead west to Zhitomir and Korosten, important rail junction points on the last north-south railroad in Russia still in German hands. But by that time the Russian supply line had become badly strained. So that, when the Germans decided to counterattack, Zhitomir and Korosten had to be given up, and for a while it looked as if Kiev itself would be threatened. It was precisely to retake the Ukrainian capital that the Nazis put forth a superhuman effort. For the loss of Kiev had unhinged the winter line which the Nazis had intended to maintain on the Dnieper. It is now apparent, however, that this goal will not be achieved.

During the past week or so Russian communiques have spoken with increasing assurance of the successful defense which the Red Army was putting up in the Kiev bulge. And yesterday Charkassy, the last remaining Nazi bastion on the middle Dnieper River between Kremenchug and Kiev, was captured by the Russians, a development that may lead to the closing of the Red pincers in the Dnieper Valley between Kiev and Kremenchug. Thus the fighting in the Kiev bulge demonstrates very clearly that while the German army on the Eastern Front still has some offensive power left, that power is exceeded by the power which the Red Army now possesses. And with the onset of winter, with all of the advantages that winter has for the Russian troops, the plight of the German forces is likely to get much worse.

Pact With The Czechs

The highly important strategic position which Czechoslovakia occupies in central Europe was fully demonstrated in the aftermath of Munich. Czechoslovakia was sacrificed. And with that sacrifice went the last barrier in the way of a German thrust into the Balkans and the last bridle on Hitler's will to war for world domination.

Russia in particular realized what would happen. Accordingly there is much encouragement in the signature at Moscow of a 20-year treaty of friendship, mutual assistance and postwar collaboration with Czechoslovakia. The two nations pledge mutual aid in defeating Germany and her satellites, agree not to make peace with a Hitlerite government, and pledge to employ their combined resources against Germany should that nation again take to the warpath. Russia likewise agrees not to interfere in the internal affairs of Czechoslovakia. Finally, there is a stipulation, obviously looking toward Poland, that the pact is open for signature to any third power bordering on Russia or Czechoslovakia which has been an object of German aggression in this war.

Whether Poland will agree to join the combination, however, is far from clear. The Czechoslovak government is certainly anxious to bring in Poland. For the new agreement is obviously a substitute for the earlier Czech-Polish customs union plan which the Czechoslovak government had to abandon as a result of Russian objections. Still, as long as Russia's territorial objectives in the west are unclear, the Poles are certain to stay aloof. Otherwise their signature would be regarded as an admission of their readiness to cede a large slice of Polish territory to the Soviet Union, something which no Polish government is likely to do.

LET US HAVE ROCK

Let us have rock around us, and the trees
That winter greenly on the stony soil
To reach their needled branches high in space
The flowering of growth through snows that foil
The easier leaves green with a transient grace.
Let us have rock whose fernless cornices
Unyielding to the hand will not be spil
Of wind or snow or sun, but still will stand
Unfailing those who have the will to grasp them,
A strong gray solace to the tortured hand,
And yet untouched by any hands that clasp them.
Let us have rock that takes the sky for cover:
Let the little grass spread the soft ground over

Republican Nomination

By Mark Sullivan

General MacArthur

IS THE STATUS of Gen. Douglas MacArthur—as respects the Republican presidential nomination—changed by the ruling of Secretary of War Stimson this week? The answer is, technically yes. Nevertheless the speculation about General MacArthur continues, with opinions widely diverging.

Secretary Stimson's ruling was in response to questions asked by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan. The questions (here condensed) were: Can an officer on active service "without any direct or indirect participation in the movement himself, accept a draft nomination for high public office . . .?" "Can the officer remain in the armed services during an election campaign in which he does not participate?"

To these questions, Mr. Stimson's answer is in effect, yes. Under his ruling, General MacArthur is free to permit the movement to nominate him for the Presidency to go on—provided he does not himself participate in the movement. He could accept the nomination and run for the Presidency, still remaining on active duty—again, provided he does not personally take part in the campaign. And if elected he could continue on active duty until the time for inauguration. Upon inauguration—which would take place a year from next January—he could resign and take up the Presidency.

BY THIS RULING, General MacArthur—or rather those who are advocating him for the presidential nomination—is in the clear. The movement in his behalf can go on. Nevertheless, the "widely divergent speculation"—to end which Senator Vandenberg asked his questions—continues. The reason lies in General MacArthur's circumstances. Nomination of him is possible—but is it practicable?

General MacArthur is commander in chief of the armed forces of the Far East. As such, he was, two years ago, in the Philippines. He was forced to leave the Philippines by the Japanese invasion almost two years ago, in February, 1942. That remains a bitter memory in General MacArthur's mind. From that time on, his personal pride, overtopping any other ambition, is to get back to the Philippines, to liberate the Filipino people from the Japs.

Will that have been accomplished by January, 1945—when General MacArthur, if he were elected, would have to take up the Presidency? The time is short, only a few weeks over a year.

Indeed, for decision by General MacArthur, the time is shorter—only six months until the Republican nomination is made. Taking into account his largest personal pride, he would hardly care to accept the presidential nomination unless he felt sure that by the time of the inauguration he would have got back the Philippines.

THERE ARE practical considerations. Even though the Army permits it, would it be practicable for General MacArthur to be a presidential nominee, running for election—during July, August, September and October next year—while remaining on active duty in the South Pacific? And would the Republican Party be handicapped in conduct of the campaign by having a candidate forbidden by Army regulations to make speeches or otherwise take a personal part in the campaign? Presumably the Republicans could not even have the customary notification ceremony, nor General MacArthur make an acceptance speech.

These objections are not necessarily a bar. The most eloquent possible campaign speeches might consist of communiques from General MacArthur announcing victories over the Japs. But to rely on military victories during a specified four months between June and November next yeaer—would be taking long chances on the fortunes of war.

In spite of all, the movement to nominate General MacArthur is earnest and vigorous. Those promoting it understand the handicaps and are not deterred.

Our Next President

I do not want a Republican for President next year; he would surely, if only for political spite, scrap many of the good things of the present Administration along with the bad. I do not want a New Dealist either; he would merely perpetuate the foolish and dangerous policies which we are now bearing. If ever in our history we need a man whose first thought would be for his country, not his party; a man with courage to say "No" to the cliques and pressure groups whose only interest is their own; a man who could draw the vote of all truly patriotic Americans regardless of party, who has proved himself for years both in State and Nation, we need him now.

We don't want a "military hero" for President merely because he is a successful soldier. He could not get us out of our mess with only military knowledge. We want a man who knows what he is talking about and has something real to say before he talks at all, and means it when he sys it. In other words we want a President like Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln or Teddy Roosevelt, and God help us if we don't get one.

Cairo And Teheran

By Sumner Welles

Future World Takes Form

NOW THAT the tumult and the shouting attendant upon the meetings of Cairo and Teheran have died, the positive accomplishments which these meetings represent can be analyzed more objectively.

The results of these meetings assure not only a coherence and unity in military strategy on the part of the four major powers which had by no means previously existed, but they also imply an extent of effective cooperation in the task of safeguarding peace and order in the postwar transition period that seemed far from certain a few months ago.

They have finally destroyed the illusory hopes to which Germany and Japan so stubbornly clung, that suspicion between the Soviet Union on the one hand, and the United States and the British Commonwealth on the other, or friction between Great Britain and China, might bring about so great a weakening of the war effort of the United Nations as to pave the way for a compromise peace.

The President has made no greater contribution to Allied unity, and has rendered no more far-reaching service in the attainment of the war aims of this country, than he has by his participation in these two epoch-making conferences.

The meeting with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo was held upon the friendly insistence of President Roosevelt.

Many causes for Chinese misapprehension have now, due, at least in part, to the influence of the President, been dispelled.

If the Chinese people are obliged to await the final all-out and concerted American and British attack upon Japan until the war in Europe is won, they are nevertheless assured, not only that the pressure against Japan will be unrelenting, but also that it is constantly rising, and that it will continue to rise until Japan is crushed.

AT THE same time, the United States and British Governments promise the people of China that they seek no territory in the Pacific themselves, and that all of the regions which Japan has seized from China during the last 60 years, and some of which China had lost the hope of regaining, will be restored to them.

In the same manner the doubts which some members of the Chinese government have had as to the future objectives of the Soviet Union in the Far East have been allayed. For while Russia clearly could not participate in the Cairo meeting so long as she is not at war with Japan, it is equally evident that the promise made to China that Manchuria would be restored to her could not have been made save with the prior knowledge and agreement of the Soviet government.

When these terms shall have been carried out, once Japan has been "expelled from all other territories which she has taken," China will become the dominant, and we have every reason to believe, a cooperative and pacific, power in Asia.

Finally, with the restoration of Korean independence, one of the great crimes of the twentieth century will have been rectified, and another stabilizing factor will have been added to the new international system which must be constructed in the Pacific.

At Teheran the long expressed desire of the President to meet alone with Stalin was at last realized. This opportunity of the heads of the Russian and American governments to talk directly—to discuss face to face the fundamental issues of the present and of the future, was not only in general salutary, but it was in particular, the most effective method of ending, once for all, the disastrous lack of close understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union which had persisted for more than a generation.

THE BASIC objective of the Teheran meeting was accomplished. It is found in the final words of the President, Stalin and Churchill:

"We leave here friends in fact, in spirit, and in purpose."

If there is any cause to cavil at the announced results of the two historic meetings, it lies in the fact that there has been as yet no indication given by the four great powers as to the manner in which the remaining members of the United Nations are to be afforded the opportunity of participating in the political decisions which must be reached, in ever-increasing number, as the war finally draws to its close. Nor is there announced any form of mechanism by which the assurances proclaimed by the four powers are to be carried out.

At Teheran the British, Soviet and American governments declared that they sought "the cooperation and active participation of all nations, large and small, whose peoples . . . are dedicated . . . to the elimination of tyranny and slavery, oppression, and intolerance." They concluded by stating, "We will welcome them as they may choose to come into a world family of democratic nations."

The question of what part they may be permitted to play, and what influence their voice may have, once they have entered this "family of democratic nations," is very obviously a matter of supreme moment to the other members of the United Nations, whether they be large or small. On that no light is as yet thrown.

The peoples who are fighting to destroy tyranny and slavery support, I believe, wholeheartedly, the political objectives announced at these two meetings, they support the principles of the Atlantic Charter, now once more reaffirmed. But they are already asking for more than generalities. They are asking how these objectives in the field of postwar political organization are to be secured. It surely is already time to tell them at least how it is proposed to constitute an initial executive agency of all of the United Nations and how it will function; and how an international trusteeship such as that which must aid the Corean people back to liberty is to carry out its responsibilities.

We may hope that fundamental and far-reaching plans such as these may soon be determined, and soon be made known, so that much unnecessary, and frankly dangerous, suspicion and uncertainty on the part of other members of the United Nations may be avoided.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

After The War

After I get out of the Army, having seen Berlin and/or Tokyo, I am not going to work for a living. Instead, I'm going to run for Congress on a platform urging purer milk for babies. Naturally, none will dare oppose this and I will be nominated by the Democrats and elected by the Republicans who don't like their man.

After election I will open a house in Georgetown and give small parties for big people until they begin to give big parties for me. I will, once monthly, rise up in the House and call for the impeachment of one or another of the members of the Cabinet, or, if news is scarce, of the Vice President. I will cry out against inflation and vote pay raises for all my constituents. I will ask for, in fact demand (for the record only), investigations of all groups or individuals which have not asked me to join.

I will have my hair cut free in ths subsidized barber shop, travel for 8 cents a mile home and back for each session, keep all my kids on the payroll and see to it that local politicians ask me to speak on all of the holidays before elections. I will eat my meals in the subsidized House cafeteria, get me at least a "C" card from the Congressional Ration Board. I will use part of the annual clerk allowance to pay my stenographer in the old home town to handle my private business, and try to get myself out of town for all important votes.

I will have myself placed on a few committees where I will be an inconspicuous but harmful member. Rather than admit the worth of the idea of an opponent I will see to it that it is handily stolen for the use of my own group. I will let my hair get out of hand (free haircuts or no) and in other ways act like the majority of present-day members of the House, who, in a time of great national danger, seem to take delight in bringing inflation, labor strife and class hatred to new and higher levels of harmfulness.

I will allow any subversive organization the free and unlimited use of my franking privilege, and when the duly constituted agency of the Government discovers that this has been going on I will say that I didn't know, and they ought to be investigated.

I will cry out in anguish against Federal bureaus whose setup is such that they have police powers. Then I will set up a committee to investigate that commission, armed with even stronger powers of the type that caused me to scream in the first place.

In other words, I will act with an almost complete lack of good sense, judgment or foresight. I will, consistently and with finesse, cut off my own nose to spite my face. I will run for reelection "on my record." And do you think for one minute that I won't be reelected? Why, you'll vote for me yourself. PANORAMA.

Some Like It Hot

With fuel rationing there was a hope that when Washington's summer ended it might be really over.

But no, the public buildings expensively air-conditioned in summer take equal pains in winter to wilt their inmates with above-normal temperatures.

Try a simple experiment. Carry your own "handbag thermometer" with you into public and private interiors (in vain will you look for a wall thermometer in most rooms or gathering places). You can find the Capitol, 87; the Justice Department, 78; Pentagon, 83; Navy Building, 84; theaters, all between 80 and 90; apartments and hotels, often 90; buses often 80 or above; banks, 85; department stores, 84 and up; trains, 92 and over.

And in democratic America, if 10 are too hot, it's the 1 who complains of being chilly who always controls the heat.

Remember Dr. Parran's reporting that London, living in cold shelters in the "blitz," had less colds and flu two years ago than well-heated Washington?

Why not a thermometer to every room, with a goal of 72 maximum?

If we lived by indoor weather reports, we might live longer!

Women In Uniform

By Malvina Lindsay

Omen Of Change

He was a Marine sergeant, she a trim little WAVE. They walked along the crowded, downtown streets, arms interlocked, holding hands. He looked down into her eyes with the dying calf expression of a youth lost to love. She smiled back archly with flushed cheeks. All along the street there were pairs in uniform, a sailor and a WAC, and engineer and a girl Marine, an ensign squiring a SPAR, a couple of Coast Guardsmen with Canadian service women.

Could it be that any of these youths were among those who, only yesterday, when the first uniformed British women began to appear on the streets here, glowered and remarked contemptuously, "Now look at that!"

The solid citizen reading his newspaper stopped to comment triumphantly, "Well, I see the WACS are falling down in their recruiting. I knew American women wouldn't go in for that sort of thing!"

Could he by any chance have been among that large and articulate group of men who early in the war remarked at sight of every uniformed volunteer worker, "I tell you every woman in the United States is dying to strut around in a uniform"?

Congressional Oratory

In this war the woman in uniform is on the firing line in the hubbub over the upset of the feminine status quo. She met it first in Congress, when in the discussion over enlisting women in the auxiliary armed forces orators leaped to their feet protesting that the use of women in such activity was "a reflection on the country's manhood" and "cast a shadow on the sanctity of the home." Only recently, when Congress denied WAVES permission to serve overseas, a Senator declared, "The Navy to my mind is a male organization." In the House, a Representative orated that "a few glamour girls seeking to get into the limelight would lure into uniform thousands of women now engaged in essential industries." Whether the bill introduced by Representative Frances P. Bolton to give commissioned rank to Army nurses (who now have the relative rank but not the official standing of officers) may be counted upon to inspire a further oratory about "woman's place" is yet to be seen.

Fear was probably father to the almost universal belief of men that women of America would rush headlong into service—just to wear uniforms. In their imaginations, they saw homes deserted, husbands supperless, children running wild, while all the women, dressed like comic opera drum majors, goose-stepped away to the battlefront. Yet enlistment figures proved them wrong. Take the WACS for example. While about 500,000 have been needed for available jobs in order to release men for the front, only about 70,000 have been recruited. Many causes contribute to this. But the chief unofficial behind the scene reason, as recently reported by Bess Furman in the New York Times, was that most men do not want their wives or sweethearts to go into uniform.

After they're in uniform of course its different. Girls in the services do not lack for beaux. Certainly the WACS arriving in North Africa, the South Pacific or even in England—where there was plenty of competition—found no masculine aversion to their outfits.

Don't Like Women "Firsts"

The feminine uniform phobia on the part of men is interesting because it is historic. The first bloomer girls, the first girls who wore divided skirts, the first girls who wore or did anything out of the norm met the same disapproval. Certainly the girls who wore slacks met it—still meet it—but like the WACS and the WAVES they get masculine attention just the same. Among many men (and nonenlisted women) this disapproval of the woman in uniform usually takes the form of belittling the contribution she is making. She would be doing more to win the war in her own kitchen—that is the stock answer, regardless of Army statistics, and regardless of the fact that most of the women in the armed forces don't have kitchens to stay in.

Masculine resistance to the uniform is really resistance to the larger social step that the enlisted woman is taking. War always accelerates social change for women. It is commonly said that the last war put woman permanently into business, and that this one will put her permanently into industry. It is also likely to put her permanently into war, a field that is supposed to have been man's last stand against the ever-trailing female.

No matter how brave and beautiful the postwar world turns out to be, man's martial responsibilities are likely to continue a long time, and he may need a little feminine help on the side. Besides, there is much talk about some form of national service for girls as well as boys. Anyway, man should not care too greatly about woman's getting into uniform, for the uniform is no longer very dressy, and war itself is no longer a glorious, glamorous adventure. And woman need not take too seriously his feeling about her uniform. He will get used to her in it, just as he got used to women teachers, Government clerks, office helpers, doctors, lawyers and welders. In fact, he is already softening up—though he doesn't know it.

Suitable Legislation

By Ernest Lindley

Votes For The Armed Forces

PROVISION FOR voting by men and women in the armed services surely cannot, and will not, be left where the Senate left it by adopting the Eastland-McClellan plan. This is not a bill to facilitate the exercise of the ballot by members of the armed forces. It is a bill to leave them effectively disenfranchised. Few people pretend that it is anything more.

LINDLEY

It is true, of course, that the provision of a Federal ballot, or its equivalent, for soldiers and sailors raises many legal and practical difficulties. The Green-Lucas bill may be open to question on constitutional grounds, although it is noteworthy that most of the best constitutional lawyers in the Senate voted for it or refrained from voting.

The argument that the Green-Lucas bill infringes the rights of the States has received a telling answer from Senator Carter Glass, one of the most stalwart defenders of State rights. Senator Glass points out that there is already on the books a Federal law specifying that no member of the armed forces shall be required to register or to pay a poll tax in order to vote in a Federal election or in primary contests for Federal offices. This law was adopted in 1942—it became effective September 16. It was adopted by a vote of 47 to 5 in the Senate and 134 to 19 in the House. The conference report was adopted by the House 248 to 53 and by a voice vote in the Senate.

THE VOTE on the anti-poll-tax amendment, which was tacked on in the Senate, was 33 to 20. Because the conference committee adopted this clause, Representative Rankin of Mississippi moved to send the bill back to conference, but was beaten 244 to 56.

Inasmuch as this is the law of the land, Senator Glass writes that he "cannot see that the rights of the States are either jeopardized or in any way involved" in the controversy over the Green-Lucas bill. Senator Glass favors giving "our armed forces away from home in the Federal service the right to vote in Federal elections for Federal officers under Federal authority and responsibility." He favors the Green-Lucas bill "without any emasculating amendments."

The 1942 bill proved inadequate. It struck down certain State barrieres to the effective exercise of the franchise by the men and women in the services, but it did not go far enough. It did not set up machinery to facilitate voting. Under the 1942 bill, only about 28,000 valid ballots were cast.

Congress has no higher duty than to facilitate the exercise of the franchise by the men and women who are doing the most to defend the democratic system, of which the ballot is the symbol. There are certain basic eligibility requirements which it cannot sweep aside. But surely it can see that all lesser obstacles are cleared away, that tape is cut, that ballots are placed in the hands of the men and women in the services in good time, and that they are returned to the proper districts and fairly counted. This was the purpose of the Green-Lucas bill.

THERE MAY be other, slightly different, means of getting approximately the same result. If, as some of the opponents of the Green-Lucas bill maintained, the States can be relied upon to pass suitable legislation to enable soldiers and sailors to vote, they might be given the opportunity to do so within a fixed period. A Federal law might be enacted giving the individual States until May 1 to adopt legislation conforming to certain standards set forth in the Federal law. The States which met these requirements could then proceed to distribute their own absentee ballots, while a central Federal board would supervise the balloting of soldiers and sailors from States which failed to pass laws meeting the requirements.

In other words, the Green-Lucas scheme could be made to apply to all States which by a given time had not amended their own absentee voting laws to conform to the standards set forth in the Federal law. These standards should be approximately those of the Green-Lucas bill, requiring, for example, that ballots be mailed in good time and that provision be made for voting by party instead of by name. This last provision is necessary because some nominations are made too late to permit the printing and distribution of ballots containing names to soldiers and sailors overseas.

Such a compromise would give individual States a chance to take care of the problem if they chose to do so, but would at the same time safeguard the ballot for soldiers and sailors from other States. The standards set for the States would have to be drawn carefully to assure that they were not evaded.

A straight-out Nation-wide system such as the Green-Lucas bill proposes is the safest and most direct way of enabling soldiers and sailors to exercise their rights as voters. A substitute of the sort set forth above is surely the minimum which Congress can enact without shameful dereliction.

The Gallup Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 14.—Now that the heat of controversy over the Patton incident has subsided, the sober reaction of the overwhelming majority of Americans is that the affair was much overrated and that Gen. George Patton should continue as usual in charge of his troops on the Italian front.

That is the consensus from a survey of public opinion by the Institute from coast to coast. The study was not begun until after the country had had a chance to acquaint itself thoroughly with the published facts and comments concerning the episode in which General Patton slapped an enlisted man, to whom he afterward apologized.

While the disposition of the affair is strictly a military matter, the reaction of the civilian public is important because it involves the question of public confidence in the Army high command.

The survey found that 85 persons out of every 100 interviewed are familiar with the incident, and those persons were asked:

"Leaving aside questions of military policy, which way would you as a citizen have greater confidence in the Army high command—if General Patton is brought back to the United States, or if he is left in charge of his troops in Italy?"

The replies show a ratio of better than 3 to 1 in favor of leaving the general at his post.

Should be brought back to U. S.	22%
Should be left in charge of his troops in Italy	70
Undecided	8

Voters included in the survey who have a family member or close relative serving in the armed forces are no more critical of General Patton than the rest of the country. In fact, they show a slightly higher vote (72 per cent) than the average for leaving him where he is.

The reasons that lie back of opinions expressed in the survey are illuminating. The following are a fair sample:

"You can't blame a man for going off the beam once in a while. He's probably learned his lesson."

"We have a war to win. One soldier's hurt feelings should not cause so much fuss."

"General Patton has proved himself qualified to lead and that's what counts."

"It was just a case of nerves. He's too fine a commander to be removed just for that one mistake."

"He has to put up with so much. No wonder he lost his temper."

"His action was inexcusable and by rights he ought to be demoted. But he would be hard to replace, so we better leave him there."

"Why is the Army so strict on discipline for soldiers when a general can't keep his self-control?"

"It's all a tempest in a teapot."

SKILLED "GROUND CREWS" HELP MAKE GREAT NORTHERN SERVICE DEPENDABLE

Five Men on Ground to Every Member of Train and Engine Crew

Skilled "ground crews" are among the many things which make Great Northern great—and a dependable transportation system.

Railways have "ground crews," too—thousands of men (and women, these days) who perform the vitally-essential tasks which keep trains rolling.

Movement of a 5,000-ton Great Northern freight train over a 400-mile division requires co-ordinated action by yardmen, car inspectors and servicemen, engine handlers, train dispatchers, water and fuel servicers, clerks, telegraphers, telephone operators and signalmen—a 90-man "ground crew."

Although not actually involved in train operation, there also are the maintenance-of-way crews who keep in shape Great Northern's tracks, signal systems, bridges, and other structures.

And, we're not forgetting the shopmen, who also are working around the clock repairing and rebuilding locomotives, freight cars, and other equipment.

Groomed by skilled mechanics, and all steamed up for the pulling job ahead, a big Great Northern locomotive leaves the roundhouse with a hostler at the throttle.

This "ground crewman" is oiling the bearing on which a car wheel rolls. Oil-soaked waste lubricates the bearing.

A maintenance crew installs new track. The machine drills holes thru the steel so that rail ends can be bolted solidly together.

A switchman throws a switch for an oncoming yard engine with cars for assembly into a train.

Wartime Sales Of Independent Stores Up 10%

The independent retailer is enjoying comparatively better business in wartime than the chain store, including mail order houses, the Department of Commerce said yesterday.

Price control, rationing and other restrictions apparently are more favorable to the merchandising efforts of the independents, the department said.

The independent stores, with their 1943 sales to reach an estimated $48,300,000,000, enjoyed a 10.5 per cent gain in business compared with 1942, which was only 1 per cent over the year before.

The chain stores this year will do an aggregate $14,600,000,000 business, about 3.5 per cent above 1942, although their business in 1942 was 13 per cent over 1941.

Eighteen Washington area residents are among 103 American Red Cross workers whose safe arrival in foreign ports was announced yesterday.

Reporting for duty as staff assistants in England were Ruth Alma Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Ferguson, 620 Lexington pl. ne., a teacher at Eliot Junior High School; Hope Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hunt of 2800 Ontario rd., State Department employes; Adelaide E. Woodley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Woodley of 1436 Spring rd., WPA and D. C. Recreation worker.

Seven of the group arrived in Hawaii: Doris Jolliff, hospital secretary, formerly a Red Cross field director here; Hazel Waller, hospital secretary, supervisor for Transcontinental and Western Airlines, Inc.; Horace J. EDUCATION for the AMERICAN PEOPLE
From one serious citizen to all others
This book is not going to be a bit of holiday frivolity. But it is going to be one by which you may start out the New Year.
It is going to be stirred to action. It is provocative—it is controversial—if you do not agree you will surely be stirred to thought and—the author hopes—to action.
Karl Stecher, lawyer and former professor, is concerned with the vital business of training American youth for earning a living in the present day world.

ELSA MAXWELL'S FAVORITE BAND, meaning Leo Dryer's 10-man orchestra, will come to Treasure Island next Tuesday, December 21, replacing the music of Army-bound Rocco Terrone. The Dryer band is said to be no end elegant and captivating, has played lengthy engagements at the Pierre, Sherry-Netherlands and other snooty Manhattan locations.

The Chateau Internationale of the Old New Orleans will open formally on New Year's Eve. But there'll be an informal opening, just for practice, on the preceding evening, December 30.

WILL A COURT BATTLE as well as singing be part of Hannah Williams' program in Washington? She opens at the Troika tomorrow night, y'know. It's been said that Hannah will sue Jack Dempsey outside of New York for the custody of their children. Maybe she'll do it here as long as Demsey is now in Washington. . . . Those ever-pleasing dancers, Columbus and Carroll, also come to Troika tomorrow. . . . La Helen Hamilton is dickering with a former husband of Barbara Stanwyck's for an appearance early in 1944.

NEW YEAR'S PRESENT FOR CHRISTMAS. Philanthropic La Conga is going to give its New Year's Eve guests a pint of whisky each (good standard brands, too) but to make it even nicer they'll turn over the liquor whenever the reservations are taken. Thus if you get your La Conga table for New Year's Eve now, you'll get your Christmas cheer immediately.

First Christmas card comes from the Mayflower Hotel, shows that handsome hostelry in bright blue framed with a pair of purple trees and with snowflakes drifting over it all.

Best dressed check girl in town is Margie White of El Patio. Last time we saw Margie she was done up in a silver fox jacket and green velvet gown with matching hat . . . Nora Williams, now at the Windsor Room, used to star at the Palladium in London . . . Patsy Gallagher, the little cut-up of Kavakos' Grill, is in California visiting her family, but will be back for the holidays . . . Lorrie Lamm was in Hi Hat the other afternoon, but as a customer, not a singer, looking chic in bright green with a tall turban and gold earrings . . . Terry Sterling of the Anchor Room is sporting an emerald green formal, splashed with sapphire spangles . . . Crossroads' Lydia Allen is said to be outdoing herself in a smart version of "Shoo, Shoo, Baby" . . . Male musicians refer to Leslie Miller, now at the Neptune Room, with what amounts to saying she's a little lady who can hold her own at organ tricks with any performer . . . You'll see nothing prettier around town than the Casino Royal's Unabelle Howard, costumed as a peppermint stick in the "Christmas Revue" . . . "Mamma" Carla, hostess at Restaurant "823," looks extra attractive in her new purple gown with curlicues of black braid.

Carl Rinaldi, Mayfair's smart head waiter, and his right bower, big Louis, are double duty men. They both work in a torpedo plant as well as at Mayfair.

2600 Offside Ditties—All clever are the repertoire of Hal Yates who in the 15 weeks he's been at Olmsted's has made friends of everyone who's entered the spot. There may be arguments about other stars, but one and all agree that Hal is the berries, the nuts, the best ever. He plays Chopin, too, and beautifully.

Melody Preferred—Tony's brilliant rendition of "Italian Street Song" in the Dubonnet Room . . . The spirited paso dobles played by Willie Leon's band at the Copacabana . . . Mary La Marr's rendition of "My Heart Tells Me" at the Lounge Riviera . . . The way Washie Bratcher's band at the Washington Hotel gives a shot of vitamins to "How Sweet You Are" . . . Mary Pierson's lovely singing of "Traviata" at Ciro's . . . "Poinciana" as played charmingly by Harold Nagel's band in the Carlton's Congo Room.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

A Famous Character Is Redrawn for Purposes Of Forthcoming Picture

IT IS TO BE FEARED that when United Artists' production of "Jack London" reaches the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, the week of December 23, preconceptions of the London character will undergo drastic revisions in many minds.

SUSAN HAYWARD

Michael O'Shea, who made his screen debut with Barbara Stanwyck in "Lady of Burlesque"—the film version of Gypsy Rose Lee's "The G-String Murders"—and is since said to have scored handsomely in the camera version of Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," is cast in the title role and plays the part after the manner of a soft-voiced and different drawing-room dreamer instead of one whose life was a succession of rugged adventures in all manner of forbidding places.

Yesterday's preview, to at least one observer, failed to draw a complete or convincing picture of any of the many aspects of the famous author's amazingly varied life. With most of those vivid facets, it deals sketchily to no definite dramatic purpose other than leading up to prophetic disclosures of the world plans and treacherous character of the Japanese, as gleaned from their disclosures at the time of the Russo-Japanese war. Even that is not pursued to any final conclusion, otherwise than by implication.

The figure of Charmian Kettridge London appears in the picture in the competent person of Susan Hayward. It is upon Charmian's book of her husband's life that the film is largely based. Mrs. London presumably knew what she was writing about, so it must be we who are so abysmally mistaken.

Nat Dorfman, one of the ablest of the theatrical stentors, dropping in for the primary purpose of leaving some especially lovely new portrait studies of Ruth Gordon, coming to the National January 3 in Max Gordon's production of her own first play, "Over Twenty-one," also dropped the word that the following week, January 10, he would be bringing "Marianne" to the same stage. "Marianne" is a musicalized story of the Free French, in which Ernest Truex will return to the local rostrum for the first time in too many seasons. The cast also will feature Jerry Wayne, a radio singer, making his stage debut; Virginia McWatters, fresh out of "Rosalinda," and Mary Jane Walsh. The book of the play is by Sylvia Regan and Kenneth White, with lyrics by Beatrice and Lothar Metzl and Robert B. Sour, and music by Abraham Ellstein. B. P. Shulberg and Marion Gering, famous veterans in the field of cinema, are the producers. Happy New Year!

The Line of March

To prevent running around in circles in quest of the first-runs on the new bills, the long-awaited "Lassie Come Home," with Roddy McDowall, Donald Crisp, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Nigel Bruce, Elsa Lanchester and the greatest dog in pictures heading the cast, will be breaking itself out on the screen at Loew's Palace on Friday—not Thursday. So will "Whistling in the Dark," at the Columbia. Friday, at the Earle, "Northern Pursuit" will be the attraction, with Errol Flynn and Julie Bishop in the top spots, with "In Old Oklahoma" moving directly to the Metropolitan. Not to offend Thursday, RKO-Keith's will present Pat O'Brien and Ruth Warrick in "The Iron Major," beginning tomorrow. At the Pix, on Saturday, another double-header will be unfurled in "St. Louis Blues" and "A Lady in Distress." Interest in "Jeannie" showing no signs of abatement, that sterling British picture will go sailing merrily along into its fifth week. So, it would be well to watch your Thursdays and Fridays. They're being juggled a bit.

Charles Previn, one of Hollywood's foremost conductors, has been chosen as musical director for Charles R. Rogers' top-budget muical, "Song of the Open Road." During 7½ years as musical director at Universal, Previn conducted the music for all of the Deanna Durbin pictures. It is too bad the film-going public can't see Charlie plying his trade. In the old days, when pictures were the outcasts of the theater and he was leading the orchestras for touring, musical, stage pieces, he used to put on as good a show on the podium as his principals did up there behind the footlights—and always got just as big a hand, maybe bigger. Quite a showman, as well as a thoroughly schooled musician.

In passing, Mr. Dorfman confides that Ruth Gordon's "Over Twenty-One" bears all the earmarks of a hit. Washington will be willing to believe that, when it learns that the new comedy was inspired by the author's experiences in the wartime Capital—just like "The Doughgirls," that other Max Gordon production that is still setting them by the ears on Broadway and wherever else the other companies are playing.

Time-by-the-Fetlock Note

Director's Son in Army Photography

Hollywood.—Three months ago Buck Private Richard De Mille, the 21-year-old son of the famous film producer, had a heart-to-heart talk with his father. Wanting his son to follow in the paternal footsteps, C. B. offered to start him in the business as third assistant director on "The Story of Dr. Wassell," starring Gary Cooper.

Richard declined. Having had a small taste of the business when he worked as a laborer on his father's "Reap the Wild Wind" during a summer vacation, he had decided he didn't like pictures.

His IQ got him in the Air Corps. But it was his name that got him sent to Lowry Field, training school for the photographic division of that branch of the service. Richard De Mille, hater of all movies, is now studying night and day to become a motion picture photographer.

'Pirates' Is Well Received at National

By Marjorie Kelly

A warmly approving audience last night enjoyed the Boston Comic Opera's performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance" presented with Burnand and Sullivan's "Cox and Box" as a curtain-raiser.

The company performed both the melodious and picturesque "Pirates" and its sprightly, farcical companion piece with the balance and polish which their two years' association has developed. The ladies treat the idiotic pleasantries of the score with the proper tender seriousness, gentlemen with the proper pompous earnestness.

"Cox and Box," a libretto built on coincidence which should have ended all librettos built on coincidence, is performed by an able cast of three—Allen Stewart, as the jovial journeyman hatter, Cox; Florenz Ames as the journeyman printer, Box; and pudgy Robert Eckles as Sergeant Bouncer, the landlord who rents them both the same room, thinking that with Cox working all day and Box all night, they'll never be the wiser. This trio maintains a rapid pace in their harmonious exchanges, and contrive with lively skill to extract from the farcical situations a full measure of comedy.

The more amply designed "Pirates of Penzance" affords Eckles, Stewart and Ames an opportunity to demonstrate their considerable versatility as they sing roles sharply different from those in the companion piece. The always amusing Eckles is a pirate captain, in long cape and curly wig, Allen Stewart a romantic and dashing young corsair, and Florenz Ames is a major general of the British Army, some 20 years or so older than the journeyman printer of "Cox and Box."

Kathleen Roche singing Mabel, the Major General's daughter is impish and quaint by turns. Her sweet soprano is at its best in such songs as "Poor Wandering One" in the first act of "Pirates." And Catherine Judah is gruff yet pathetic in the role of Ruth, the piratical maid-of-all-work. And the chorus doubled effectively as pirates and policemen in different scenes.

Perhaps the most rousingly received song of the evening was the lugubriously plaintive "A Policeman's Lot Is Not a 'Appy One," chanted by the chorus and led by Robert Pitkin.

The enthusiastic reception accorded this double bill proves anew, if anyone needed it proven, that the appeal of Gilbert and Sullivan's ingenious plots, farfetched rhymes, and their unique combination of exquisitely barbed satire and exquisitely lovely music is still fresh. Few of the witticisms have lost their sting, and the familiar music, after so many years, gains rather than loses in popularity.

Broadway Plans

Cornelia Otis Skinner, co-author of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," which Paramount is filming with Riana Lynn and Gail Russell, is preparing to star in a new Broadway show based on England's Queen Elizabeth and Lord Leicester.

Longest Role

Her co-starring role with Sonny Tufts in Mark Sandrich's "I Love a Soldier" is the biggest of Paulette Goddard's career. She worked 60 days without missing a scene.

New York, Dec. 14.—An American official who recently visited Moscow met Molotov and asked him: "How do you intend to treat the Germans, after the war?" Molotov's reply indicated that, comparatively, they would be treated with generosity . . . "I can't understand it," said the American. "What about their atrocities, the things they have done to your people, your cities?" . . . "Oh, those were Nazis. We'll take care of them. That's a different matter" . . . "So you differentiate between Nazis and Germans?" asked the American. "What about the centuries of German aggression?" . . . "A worker is a worker," said Molotov, "and workers, not Nazis, we can use."

Edgar Allan Woolf, the playwright-screenwriter who died in Hollywood recently, made his debut as a dramatist at the old Madison Square Garden Roof. It was at the premiere of this, Woolf's first play, that Harry K. Thaw shot and killed Stanford White, the famed architect . . . Woolf used to tell of his mother, who was present at the opening of her son's first play. When Thaw fired his gun at White, Mrs. Woolf—who was seated up front shrieked: "My God, they've shot Edgar."

This story now is current in Hollywood—of the man who told his friend: "We had a fine time over the weekend. We were over to the Grants" . . . "Really? The Cary Grants?" he was asked . . . "No. Joe Grant," he replied. "Then, for dinner we were invited to the Mendls" . . . "Lady Mendl?" he was asked . . . "No. Irving Mendl," he answered. "The Coopers were there, too" . . . "Gee, Gary Cooper?" he was asked . . . "No. Andy Cooper," he replied. "And then, after dinner, we all went over to the Steins" . . . "Gosh," said his friend. "Jules Stein?" . . . "Yes," he answered. "Jules Stein."

Gabriel Pascal cables from London: "The first of my 1944 productions will be G. B. Shaw's 'Caesar and Cleopatra,' in Technicolor, starring Vivien Leigh and Claude Rains" . . . Abe Lyman will take a 14-piece orchestra overseas next month. The Ritz Bros. also will make the trip . . . Bosley Crowther of the New York Times suggested to MGM that when the new film, "Madame Curie," opens here, the name of the theater be changed to Radium City Music Hall . . . Jack Carson will be starred by Warner Bros. . . . Howard Hughes, the millionaire producer, bought the screen rights to Hemingway's "To Have and Have Not," for $10,000, and sold them to Warners for $50,000.

Helen Hayes awoke from an afternoon nap, at Nyack, and jumped—when she saw an aged, bent Negro and a golden-haired girl approaching across the open field. Miss Hayes, steeped in her role of Harriet Beecher Stowe, finally had her calm restored when the pair identified themselves, not as Uncle Tom and Little Eva, but as the butler and daughter of Neighbor J. P. McEvoy.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOME EXTREMELY IMPORTANT CONFERENCES have been taking place between the State Department and the Treasury which the public doesn't known about but which may influence our whole policy on the South American continent for years to come.

Briefly summarized, the conferences involve the question of whether the United States should crack down on Argentina. Specifically, they involve the question of whether we should permit Argentina to sneak her gold out of this country and continue to use her credit in United States banks to pay off Nazi agents in the United States.

Actually, they also involve the broader question of whether a gang of pro-Nazi army officers, educated in Germany, should be permitted to continue to thumb their noses at the United States, while every other Latin-American country anxious to be friendly with this country is amazed that we let them get away with it.

During these State Department conferences, a battery of Treasury officials has argued vigorously that we must crack down on Argentine finances. A coterie of diplomats has sat around Mr. Hull's desk, most of them arguing to the contrary. The Secretary of State himself swings his black-ribboned pince-nez glasses and listens. So far, nothing has happened.

Amazing Argentine Intrigue

MEANWHILE, THE STORY of what is happening in Argentina continues to be the most amazing of the war. Few people realize that the most pro-Nazi nation outside of Occupied Europe has developed right under the wing of our Good Neighbor policy.

There is a strong censorship in Argentina. Any newsman who writes what is really happening is kicked out of the country, sometimes beaten up by gangsters. But pieced together from diplomatic dispatches, from reports of returned diplomats and from the underground, here is a close-up picture of what is happening.

The former government of aged President Castillo was conservative, isolationist but somewhat pro-American, and leaned increasingly toward the United States as it became apparent that the war was sure to go in our favor.

Then, suddenly, a clique of Argentine army officers seized power. This was on June 4, one month after we had triumphed in Tunisia, several months after the tide of Russian defeat had turned to victory at Stalingrad, and when it was quite obvious even to doubting Argentines that the Allies would come out victorious.

The revolution was engineered within a few hours, with the loss of only 30 lives. The Army simply took command. The men who led the army were, almost without exception, friendly to Germany. Many of them had been educated there. An even greater number had been carefully cultivated by the Nazis.

And what most people don't know is that many Argentine army officers, paid meager salaries, had borrowed heavily from German friends. Some of them, though not pro-German at heart, were subjected to blackmail and threat of exposure regarding these debts unless they played the Nazi game.

Place of Refuge for Hitler

ONE THEORY which cannot be proved, but which is believed by many diplomatic observers, is that Hitler's gang for years had worked to build up a place of exile for themselves in case of defeat. After the fall of Stalingrad and then Tunisia, they began to see defeat staring them in the face. That, therefore, was the cue to move in Argentina.

But what can be proved is that concrete Nazi plans had been made long ago to seize the oil fields of Patagonia; also that the crew of the Graf Spee had special training and instructions to infiltrate into Argentina for revolutionary purposes in case of naval defeat.

Spearhead of pro-Nazi leadership in Argentina is Gen. Vasilio Pertine, who served as Argentine military attache in Berlin during the last war and was so pro-German that he offered his services to Germany and they were accepted. Since then, he has been president of two large German companies, Semma and Afa Tudar Varta.

Today, under the revolutionary regime, General Pertine is Mayor of Buenos Aires, which, because so much of Argentina's population is concentrated in this one city, is the second most important post in the country.

Also, you can see General Pertine's car parked outside the German and Japanese Embassies several times a week. He is one of the close personal friends of Baron Tomii, the Japanese Ambassador, and of Dr. Meyner, the German charge d'affaires.

Some time ago, a letter written by a Nazi, but intercepted in the mails, told of a conversation with General Pertine in which the general had expressed himself in perfect agreement with certain German plans.

Gestapo Tactics

TOUGHEST MEMBER of the Argentine cabal is Colonel Perrone, Minister of Labor, who has now abolished labor unions and established concentration camps for political, religious and labor prisoners. Liberal Argentines and labor leaders who continue any subrosa opposition to the government are sent to these camps without trial. No news of their disappearance appears in the newspapers.

Colonel Perrone once gave an interview to a Chilean newsman in which he revealed the manner in which his cabal kept all the 3600 officers of the Argentine army under control. "We required each officer to write out his resignation," Perrone explained, "and we keep it for use whenever desired."

Another terrorist member of the new government is Assistant Police Chief Lugones, who under the Uriburu dictatorship was nicknamed "Uriburu's torturer." Lugones has organized a new Gestapo which so permeates the cafes that it is unsafe for anyone to criticize the government.

Pro-Nazi Argentine police have used the foreign utilities as their special whipping boys, and confined the head of one Swiss company to his office for 10 days, after which he was ordered to stay at his home for another 10 days. No charges were lodged against him.

Two executives of Electric Bond & Share, William Reece and David Watson, were detained in a police station from 12 to 24 hours, for no reason whatsoever. Finally, they were released after being made to sit all the time in one chair without moving.

Sitting in a chair is the favorite form of Argentine-Nazi punishment. An anti-Nazi merely sits in the police station night and day for a week, waiting for the police chief, who never turns up. He is not allowed to move from the chair. Then he is released.

Meanwhile, foreign utility companies have had to open their books to Argentine inspectors, in one case as far back as 1912.

Home Rule Demand Delays Farm Labor Fund Program

By the Associated Press

Demands for more "home rule" in handling the farm labor problem prompted the House Appropriations Committee to send the 1944 financing program back to a subcommittee yesterday to determine where centralized authority should stop and State and local responsibility begin.

In general, the committee was agreed on the need of continuing the farm labor program, but undecided how to split up the recruiting task between the War Food Administration and the Agriculture Extension Services, which are largely local in character.

Must Decide by December 31

Congress has only until December 31 to decide the issue. Expenditures have not been authorized beyond that date.

For 1944, the WFA had asked for 35 million dollars and authority to spend $4,529,394 in unexpended funds.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri said the committee split on whether WFA and the extension service, or the extension service alone, should handle the labor recruiting task. After adopting an amendment to give the entire program to the extension service, the committee recommitted the entire bill.

Funds Shared Now

Funds for the current program are shared by WFA and the extension services, the former handling foreign labor and interstate operations, and the latter taking care of intrastate labor needs.

The urgency of continuing the program another 12 months was stressed by Marvin Jones, head of WFA, during testimony before the committee.

Despite the use of war prisoners, troops, Japanese evacuees, laborers imported from Mexico, the Bahamas and Jamaica, and extensive use of women and children on the farms, Jones told the committee, there will be a need for 287,600 more men working full time to meet 1944 food goals.

Since April, 1940, he estimated, some four million workers have left the farms for the armed services or industry.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

THROUGH THE YEARS, THIS SUPERB TASTING MINERAL WATER NEVER CHANGES.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This guy Roger Wolff, who was acquired by the Nats from Connie Mack in the Buck Newsom swap, had a ten-year itinerary to the big leagues that reads like a tour of the hinterland whistle-stops. He made it after playing with 14 clubs in seven minor leagues.

POVICH

Back in his native Chester, Ill., Wolff was the butcher's boy. His pop carved the town's meat, but the butchery trade held no charms for Roger and at the age of 16 his pitching for the Red Bud High School team fetched scouts of the St. Louis Cardinals a-running. They came bearing contracts and Roger signed.

The Cardinals gave Wolff quite a whirl in their farm system. Between the years of 1930 and 1933, they had him with seven different clubs. He was making all the stops—Danville, Keokuk, Denver, Springfield, Terre Haute, Fort Worth and Dayton. In Dayton, he finally stayed put for three years.

Eventually the Cardinals gave up on him. They said Roger didn't take his pitching seriously enough. And so Roger moved on to Oklahoma City, to Dallas, to Sioux City and Sioux Falls, and to Cedar Rapids and Williamsport, always tabbed as a guy who would be a big leaguer some day.

Wolff was throwing his knuckle ball in the minors long before Dutch Leonard was popularizing the pitch in big leagues. He wasn't one of the new crop of knuckle-ballers who started dabbling with the pitch after Leonard had demonstrated that it could win in the majors. Back in Danville, Cardinal scouts had encouraged Wolff in the knuckler despite the fact that green kids are not supposed to dabble with freak pitches until they can first show a fast ball.

Connie Mack became interested in Wolff during the fag end of the 1941 season when the big fellow had won 16 games for Williamsport in the Eastern League after losing only 9. Mack owned Williamsport and wanted a look at Wolff before the season ended, so he called him up to the A's.

What Mack saw didn't annoy him much. He started Wolff for the first time against the Nats in September of 1941 and watched him pitch a losing game that wasn't exactly disgraceful. He held the Nats to three hits, but lost because Dutch Leonard pitched a four-hit game and nosed him out ,1-0. Wolff made one more start before the season ended. He lost to the Red Sox. Joe Cronin told Connie Mack "that guy has the best knuckler I ever saw."

There are ball players who will go out on a limb and say that Wolff's knuckler is, indeed, the best in the league. Jimmy Dykes is among those who thinks so. "That fellow drives my team nuts. We never know when he's going to throw the ball, much less which way it's going to break," says Dykes.

Wolff doesn't waste any motion in his pitching. There are virtually no preliminaries, hardly a windup. He simply grabs the ball, does a funny little waggle with his hips, almost a shimmy, and lets it fly off his finger tips.

With the Athletics, Wolff was throwing his knuckles under a handicap, too. The A's catchers, Wagner and Swift, were no great artists at receiving the knuckler. He'll do better at Washington with Jake Early and Angelo Giuliani as his catchers.

When Jesse Flores, the A's rookie sensation was winning seven straight for the Athletics last spring, he owed a deep bow to Wolff. Flores didn't finish six of those games. Wolff cleaned up for him and made Flores' leads stand up in the late innings. All that, and taking his regular turn, too.

Connie Mack paid Wolff a supreme compliment one day last season, even if he had to violate a cardinal precept of baseball to do it. The A's were playing at Boston one day and had a one-run lead in the ninth, with a Red Sox on third and two out, when Mack called Wolff into the game.

In this situation, Mack ordered Wolff to pass the next hitter purposely. Against all the orthodoxy of the game, Connie was deliberately putting the winning run on base. And then he went further than that. With Babe Barna now hitting for the Red Sox, Mack ordered First Baseman Dick Siebert to play off the bag. Mack was letting the winning run go to second unmolested.

The Red Sox and the fans in the park were amazed at Mack's strategy, but Mack was going to win or lose on Wolff's ability to get Barna out on strictly knuckle-ball pitching. Barna used to play for Mack, who knew his limits. Wolff threw nothing but knuckle balls and got rid of Barna on a meek tap to the infield and the A's had the ball game. Wolff is a handy guy to have around.

Yale to Keep Sports Program Alive in '44

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 14 (AP).—Yale found intercollegiate athletic competition so thriving in 1943 that it is going ahead full steam with plans for 1944 in football, baseball, swimming and basketball.

The university has given its approval and Athletic Director Ogden D. Miller is frankly elated.

Back in the spring of 1943, when many other institutions of higher learning were shedding coaches and schedules like poor relatives in frenzied haste to conform to imagined necessity for sober concentration on wartime courses, Yale courageously stuck to its guns.

Miller and the corporation believed a reasonable athletic program would help incalculably to build morale, stimulate the competitive spirit, and give the boys a needed breathing spell from more serious duties.

Heave-Ho for Elite Sports

Quick to sense the need for a sensible program that would entail no long trips it dropped competitors whose meeting would put demands on the transportation system of the country. Realistically, it gave the heave-ho to various elite sports which had attracted few students, involved comparatively large costs.

And when the season was over Miller found, he said today, that the program had "vindicated our belief when we decided on a four-major sports policy. We were certain we could carry it out successfully and we di

Gone last s[illegible] summer and fall were the plush days of athletic plenty on Yale's sports scene. Until two years ago, the Blue fielded units in 17 sports running all the way from such caviar items at polo and rowing, down to plain ordinary boxing and wrestling. So what? They were not conspicuous by their absence.

No Eye to Attendance

Missing, too, were the big crowds of former years at football games (103,000 fans at seven home games against 124,800 to six in 1942), but, as Miller says, "the schedules were made without an eye toward attendance. Actually, however, the crowds exceeded expectations substantially.

"What we were mainly interested in," insists Miller, "was the morale of the students, which includes hundreds of Navy and Marine trainees, and we feel we have been successful."

Mort Cooper Fails To Pass Physical Exam for Army

St. Louis, Dec. 14 (AP).—Morton Cooper, ace pitcher of the National League Champion St. Louis Cardinals, was rejected for military service today because he did not meet physical standards of the Army.

COOPER

The public relations office in announcing the result of Cooper's examination would not give details. It was recalled, however, that Cooper injured his back in a fall last winter and had trouble with his pitching arm during the past season.

His brother, Walker Cooper, catcher of the Cardinals, recently was accepted by the Army for limited service, but he has not yet been called for active duty.

Bennett Beats Latsios; Aaron Perry Wins

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Truett (Rip) Sewell, who tantalized the National League batters last year with his "blooper" pitch, gives 5-year-old son Jimmy a lesson at their Plant City, Fla., home.

Local Greek Loses First In 15 Starts

By Al Costello

The 14-bout winning streak of Nick Latsios was terminated last night by Charley Bennett, Negro welterweight from Baltimore, in an upset at Turner's Arena where Latsios was a 6-to-1 favorite in the betting.

Latsios, now an Air Forces corporal at Bolling Field, had a five-pound weight advantage on the 141-pound Bennett but his attempts to pull the fight out with rallies in the final rounds fell short of earning him the decision.

In the eight-round cofeature, Aaran Perry, Washington's upcoming Negro lightweight, punched his way to an easy, one-sided decision over Taffy Cummings of the Royal British Navy. It was Perry's ninth straight victory.

One Judge Votes Draw

Bennett, who erased Washington's Eddie Kane from the big-time picture only last week at Turner's Arena, won only after a close fight which saw Referee Charley Reynolds and Judge Frank Schuyler voting for him and Judge Dr. O. U. Singer casting a draw ballot. However, the victory for the rising young Negro could not be denied.

He was consistently off ahead of heretofore undefeated Nick and was doing the cleaner punching. Amassing an early lead, the wily Bennett waited until the fifth round and then thoroughly confused Latsios by switching to in-fighting, pummeling the Greek around the midsection without letup. Latsos, meanwhile, could not get untangled and try as he might could never land his harder hitting right hand which may have ended things with a direct hit.

In the seventh and eighth rounds, Latsios rallied superbly and come with a rush. Obviously in better condition than Bennett, who was slowly tiring under the fast pace, he threatened to pull the bout out, punching Bennett around in good style, but could not overcome the Negro's huge advantage.

The crowd of 1169 paying customers, who dropped a gross gate of $1665 into the Turner-Menendoz till, could not find fault with either of the two decisions in the co-main events.

Taffy Got Pulled

Perry outdid the tough little Englishman in everything but gameness. The local Negro pasted Taffy around without letup, shooting staggering rights at will and landing most of them. Perry's left, too, was effective most of the time, slashing its way into the Englishman's face and leaving it a smear of blood most of the route.

In the third, a stinging right dumped Cummings to the canvas for a count of two, but he was up and, although visibly groggy, carried on gamely. From that point on, Referee Charley Reynolds was watching Cummings carefully as Taffy staggered four or five more times as Perry continued to hurl his terrific bombardment.

Cummings fought back always, never letting up in his frantic efforts to carry the fight to Aaron but lacking the weapons to do so. Although Perry took more punches than he should have, he was wading in, disregarding them after he toppled Cummings to the canvas in the third simply because the steam had long since evaporated from Taffy's blows.

Fighting Finazzo Wins

In the best of the three six-round preliminaries, Johnny Finazzo, 170, one of the famous Fighting Finazzos of Baltimore, was given the verdict over Billy Duncan, 176½, Fort Belvoir Negro soldier. A slugging match with honors almost even in the wild-swinging affair, Finazzo's edge came in the second round via a looping right which deposited Duncan on the deck for an eight count.

Other bouts saw Harry Duddick, 136½, decision Joe Longo, 136, of Baltimore, and Don Bacala, 134, Baltimore, and Jimmy McGriff, 140, Washington, battle to a stirring draw, although many thought the local Negro should have been given the nod.

Redskin Prescription: Football—Plenty of It

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Redskins are going on a strictly football diet 72 hours before Sunday's Eastern divisional playoff game with the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds.

Coaches Dutch Bergman and Turk Edwards will pack 26 players, movie machines, blackboards and play diagrams off to the Westchester Country Club in Rye, N. Y., tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and until game time Sunday at 2:05 the 'Skins are going to get football and nothing else.

Bergman presented the plan to the squad at yesterday morning's lengthy meeting and it met with unanimous approval. The 'Skins stayed at the Westchester club in 1936-37 and '38 in preparation for Eastern Championship games.

The weekend will not be any picnic for the players. Bergman plans a meeting and movies of both Giant games tomorrow night after dinner.

Two Workouts Friday

Friday two outdoor workouts are scheduled, and in case of snow or extreme cold a big room is available for an indoors drill. Movies of the Giant games which the 'Skins lost, 14-10 and 31-7, will be shown probably twice Friday plus a meeting at night.

The team will work Saturday morning outdoors and probably go through additions to the offense in the afternoon indoors, plus more movies and a skull session at night. After the usual Sunday morning pep talk Dutch figures the 'Skins will go down to the Polo Grounds and tear the Giants to pieces. Wilbur Moore and Dick Farman will not make the trip.

"The trip will give us an opportunity to accomplish things we would otherwise not be able to," Bergman said. "As it is now, I have the boys for about two hours in the morning and as their living quarters are scattered all over Washington and the suburbs, plus their work, I don't see them again the rest of the day. Up there we can think and talk football and

Extra Game Pay Due for 'Skins, Giants

Redskin and New York Giant players will receive game salaries from Sunday's divisional play-off game in the Polo Grounds, with 50 per cent of the net receipts to each club.

The Giant and Redskin management will split the rest after the following deductions, according to the National Football League constitution: All Federal and State taxes; the league's 4 per cent park rental; visiting club expenses including the player roster and seven extras (which means trainer, equipment men, manager, doctor, etc.); entertainment; band and incidental expenses. But there still will be a lot left.

The New York Giants' front office has the last laugh on Commissioner Elmer Layden. When it looked as though the Redskins were sure things for the play-off which was originally scheduled for December 19, Layden wired all clubs the annual meeting would be held December 20 in Chicago, following the championship game.

C. U. Quintet Scores, 52-29, For 3 in Row

Catholic University basketball team made it three in a row when they defeated Fort Meade's Ninety-third Medical Unit, 52 to 29, on the Brookland floor last night. The Cardinals jumped into an early lead and were never seriously challenged. They led at the midway mark, 18 to 11.

Dick Scanlon, the Red and Black senior pivotman, proved the offensive thrust of the opening frame, caging a quartet of baskets for a total of eight points for the collegians. He was assisted in this department by Fred Rice, jr., and little Gene Szklarz, who netted a pair of baskets for four points each in this period.

It was Scanlon who also inaugurated the second-half attack when he rimmed a two-pointer from close in and Johnny Mercak and Szklarz came to his aid to cage a pair of free throwns for a 22-11 lead before O'Connor could tally for the militia.

Mercak, Carlin, Szklarz, Rice and Scanlon then proceeded to hit from close range to run the count to 31-13 before Martin could put the soldiers back in the game with a short basket.

Mercak was the Red Birds' threat in the nightcap session, shivering the cords for five field goals and a trio of charity tosses for 13 points. He finished the evening as top scorer with a total of 15 points. He was closely pushed for honors by Dick Scanlon, who hit the hoops seven times for a total of 14 points.

Catholic had the situation well under control from the initial whistle and the Cards were in danger at no time throughout the game. OSCAR ELDER.

Bertelli Gets Touchdown's Top Award

Pvt. Angelo Bertelli, U. S. Marine Corps, has been selected by the Touchdown Club of Washington as the outstanding college football player of 1943 and will receive the Walter Camp Memorial Trophy at the club's annual dinner on January 11 at the Statler Hotel.

BERTELLI

President Bob Simmons of the Touchdown Club made known the selection yesterday, along with the announcement of other awards by the Touchdown Club.

Simmons revealed that Bertelli, Notre Dame's star forward passer and quarterback, until he joined the Marines, was selected for the award by a narrow margin over Bob Odell, Penn captain and outstanding backfield man of the East.

The Rockne Trophy to the outstanding college lineman of the year—to Casmir Myslinski, captain and center of the West Point team.

The Bob Smith Trophy to the outstanding player on service teams—to Dick Todd, former Redskin back who played with Iowa Preflight.

The Bob Smith Trophy is a new award by the Touchdown Club, made in memory of the first club member killed in action in World War II. Smith was a U. S. Army flier on the African Front.

Bruins Gain Lead

Boston, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Boston Bruins gained the National Hockey League's runner-up berth tonight by topping the Chicako Blackhawks for an exciting 4-3 triumph.

Loyola Beats American U. Cagers, 33-26

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (AP).—Loyola College won its third straight Mason-Dixon Conference basketball game tonight by defeating American University 33-26.

The Greyhounds drove ahead in the last seven minutes from a 26-all tie, after the Navy trainee Eagles had led almost all the way. Within 8 seconds of the close of the second quarter, Gene O'Conor scored a setup to put Loyola in front, 20-19.

The civilians expanded their lead to 24-23 in the third quarter to pave the way for a field goal by Bill Davis and Jim Lacy. Bob Miller tossed a free throw on a foul and Herky Latimer threw a field goal from the outside to tie the score.

Then Lacy registered on a pivot shot following a rebound recovery and two free throws on separate fouls to bring his night's total to 17 points. He passed to O'Conor for the final Loyola field goal after American vainly deserted its zone for a man-for-man defense.

Oklahoma A. & M. And Long Island Quintets Triumph

New York, Dec. 14 (INS).—Long Island University and the Oklahoma Aggies, the favorites, ran true to form and chalked up victories tonight in the opening basketball doubleheader at Madison Square Garden before 13,400 fans.

Long Island took the opener, 56 to 41, from Brigham Young University, and the Oklahoma Aggies triumphed over City College of New York, 39 to 27, in the nightcap.

Bob Kurland, 7-foot tall center, proved too much for City College in the feature game. Supported by a well-balanced team, Kurkland accounted for 17 points and, on the defensive, prevented at least a dozen Beaver goals from finding the basket.

Fort Belvoir Bows

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Paced by the sharpshooting Benny Cunningham, giant center, the Norfolk Naval Air Station quint easily disposed of the Fort Belvoir, Va., cagers here tonight, 75 to 31.

Eastern High decisively trounced the Anacostia High cagers last night, 39 to 20.

Dellinger, Eastern's forward, paced the attack of the winners, rimming the hoops for a total of five field goals and two free shots to personally account for a dozen points. Charnok, his teammate, and Kline, of Anacostia, were runners-up with 10 points each.

Keeping Bears Sharp for Big Game Dull Job for Anderson

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Hunk Anderson has been talking about so many "ups" and "downs" that if you didn't know him as one of the Chicago Bears' three coaches you'd think he ran an elevator.

ANDERSON

It seems it has been a tremendous job trying to keep an edge on the Bears, who will have been without game competition exactly 28 days when they meet either New York or Washington (guess who) for the National Pro Football championship here December 26.

"First we're up, then we're down," Hunk said. "Last week we had two of the best workouts we've had all season. Our men were so keenly balanced that they would come up to the big game in perfect mental and physical shape.

"Then the Giants knock off the Redskins again—and now they got to meet again in a play-off and the championship game has been moved back to a post-Christmas party. The delay has spoiled all our groundwork."

Currently, the Bears are in the midst of a three-day layoff, ordered as a precaution against losing what "edge" they may have.

"Trying not to get them overripe," Hunk explained.

Cocoach Luke Johnson said in all seriousness that the squad would be divided—"one unit to prepare for the Giants and the other for the Redskins." The outcome of Sunday's play-off will determine which Bear team will start in the championship game.

Meanwhile, battle-scarred Bronko Nagurski, the Bear fullback, arrived in Chicago actually believing the title contest was next Sunday. He had departed from his Minnesota farm before learning the Giants had spanked the Redskins 31-7 and necessitated a play-off.

Sid Luckman, the record-breaking passer, removed some of the tension by announcing he would definitely be on hand to play in the big game. It was thought Sid, an ensign, might be required to report for maritime service next week and miss his last pro appearance until after the war.

The advance ticket sale for the post-Christmas party has been brisk, with some 30,000 snatched up for $118,947. The team has voted to split the receipts of the game into 32 1-3 shares, full shares going to the 26 regular players and to each of the three coaches. Among those voted half shares were Bob Masters, recently obtained from the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Lieut. Bill Osmanski, now a dental officer at Great Lakes. John Siegel and Bill Geyer, former players now in service, will receive one-third shares.

Buck Newsom Placed in 1-A

Hartsville, S. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—Louis Norman (Bobo) Newsom, right-handed pitcher who has just been traded to the Philadelphia Athletics by the Washington Senators, has just been mailed his reclassification as 1-A by his local Selective Service board here.

Newsom's file was transferred to Washington, D. C., for his physical examination, a spokesman here said, adding that he had requested a pre-induction examination.

The next call by the Hartsville board of registrants for induction will be January 25, 1944, and Newsom's order number is scheduled to be included. If so, he will be ordered to report to Fort Jackson on that date.

Newsom has just left Hartsville for Washington.

His trade to the Athletics for Pitcher Roger Wolff was announced yesterday. Newsom, contacted here, said he knew nothing about the deal and declined to comment.

Randle's Queen Wins at Charles Town

Mare Scores 2d Victory Of Meeting

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 14.—Randle's Queen, consistent 6-year-old daughter of Espino and Glorify, won her second purse of the meeting in the sixth race, outstanding event on the Tuesday program. Racing in the colors of Raymond Soo of Washington, who acquired her through the claiming box at Marlboro, Randle's Queen answered the urging of Jockey Sammy Palumbo to win with daylight to spare. W. Keegan's Fair Hero was second, in front of Mrs. H. R. Miler's Incentor in the field of eight going over the Charles Town Course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

The victory was the twelfth of the year in 28 tries for Randle's Queen and she was clocked in 1:16 1-5 while running for the favorite players, who collected a $3.60 mutuel. The track was fast and the weather warmer than yesterday. Some 3500 customers took part in the day's action.

The day's second best event, the fifth, proved a romp for the Washington owned Flamingo Farm's Bill K, piloted by Jockey Carson Kirk, leading rider at the meeting. J. T. Sadler's Primarily was second, with Mrs. Arthur White's Pilates Heart third. The winner, clocked in 1:20 3-5 for the 6½ furlongs, paid $9.80.

The daily double of $27.50 went to 159 ticket holders. Jockey C. Kirk rode the favorite, W. C. Bell's Oddree, home in the first race at a $4.60 mutuel, and his brother, Woodrow, piloted A. H. Taylor's Bel Soma, the $13.40 shot that accounted for the chief money in the second.

NOTES—When the field in today's fifth race chased the Flamingo Farm's Bill K, the 5-year-old was waving a dollar bill at them. A stable groom plaided the ace note into the horse's tail and said, "Anybody who catches this horse can have the dollar." Of course, they failed to get close to the son of Register. Judy Johnson, trainer and steeplechase rider, is recovering from an operation and is at Emergency Hospital in Washington. She was hurt while riding in Canada last summer. The veteran rider I thought always leveling, isn't. Jockey Leon Garrett will leave for his Nashville (Tenn.) home on Friday. Danny Scocca plans to go to Florida. He turned down offers to ride at New Orleans. A carload of horses will leave next week for Cuba.

den: "How do you know the championship game will be played December 19?"

P. S.—He didn't.

The Giants have stepped up in the estimation of the oddsmakers in New York after beating the Redskins twice. Odds offered yesterday were 7 to 5 and take your choice, or three points and take your choice. Tuesday odds of previous weeks have favored the Redskins by 13 points each time.

The league saved considerable embarrassment by not naming the team on the championship playoff game tickets, although the date inscribed is December 19. The game will be played December 26.

Pasteboards now being sold in Chicago are inscribed "Chicago Bears vs. Eastern Division Champions."

Yvon Robert Defends Title Here Tonight

Yvon Robert, the handsome Canadian who rules as champion of the National Wrestling Association, will defend his title tonight at Turner's Arena. Robert's opponent will be that villainous hooded grappler otherwise identified as the Yellow Mask.

This will be a one fall to a finish match and will mark Robert's second defense of his title in five weeks locally. The last time the big blond battler appeared here was against Maurice LaChppelle, who bowed in a bruising match.

The Yellow Mask, back to the local wars after a two-year sojourn on the Pacific Coast and the Midwest, recently drew with Frank Brunowicz, and last week turned back Dr. John Bonika, the Boston medico, in a cofeature scrap.

LaChappelle, the Flying Frenchman, will wrestle in a semiwindup, facing Jack Wentworth of Boston.

Chief Bamba Tabu, Oklahoma Indian, and Jimmy Britt, former British army title claimant, will clash in a return 30-minute battle, by popular demand.

Dick Bishop, a newcomer from Boston, will oppose Michele Leone, the Italian champion, and Mike DeMetre, another new face, will be unveiled in a bout against John Vansky, starting at 8:45.

keep the boys' minds on the game. I think it's just what we need."

Injuries Hit Giants

Only the players who felt in the need of a jog or two around the field went outdoors yesterday morning. Dutch said they had a "good meeting," and the spirit of the squad was excellent. Clyde Shugart was given the day off and Frank Ribar called in sick but with the exception of Farman and Moore the rest of the players were on hand. "We'll be in better physical condition Sunday than in the previous Giant games," Bergman said.

The injury jinx has hit the Giants, according to reports from New York, as Frank Liebel, the second-year pro from Norwick College, who scored the Giants' second touchdown on a 56-yard pass play from Emery Nix, has a fractured nose and his chances of playing Sunday depend on whether a special mask can be obtained before game time.

Charles Avedisian, the stocky guard from Providence College, in his second year with the Giants, has a shoulder separation. He probably will play but will be handicapped. Bill Paschal, ground-gaining champion of the year, hobbled around on a leg stiffened from a bruise.

Based on ticket sales for the first two days the game will draw the Polo Grounds capacity of nearly 60,000. The Giants were forced to open an additional ticket office to meet the demand.

Gonzaga Defeats Montgomery Blair

Gonzaga High defeated Montgomery Blair by a 37-35 score at Gonzaga gym yesterday, with the invaders coming up to threaten late in the game after trailing by 6 points at the half. Cranston was top scorer for the Purple, with Cancredi coming through with most of the foul shots. Padden and Klipstein were top men for the Blairs.

'Share' Plan Is Indorsed By Jennings

By Robert Tate Allan

The "Share Your Homes at Christmas" project, designed to brighten Yule for throngs of war-workers and servicewomen here, yesterday was indorsed by Coleman Jennings, civic leader.

He is chairman of the ocordinatin geouncil on home hospitality, chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, and was campaign chairman of the recent Community War Fund drive.

"The 'Share Your Home at Christmas' program," declared Jennings, "should receive the wholehearted backing of our community. At no time of the year does a home have more significance.

"If the Government workers and servicewomen who are serving their country in this city cannot be in the setting which spells out Christmas to them, we can at least offer them the best substitute in our power and indirectly bring a blessing on our own homes by so doing. I hope there will be a large and enthusiastic response to this plan."

Among the prospects for guests in the "share" project are a number of British and Canadian women in uniform stationed in the Capital, far from their homes.

The "share" idea is being sponsored by the Federation of Churches' defense commission with the aid of The Washington Post and Government and social agencies.

Grateful Veteran Holiday Host

George W. McDonald, chauffeur f.. the British Supply Council here, never has forgotten the kindness of the British and Scotch when he was in a Glasgow Hospital in the first World War.

So he and Mrs. McDonald, who live at 6215 43d st., Riverdale, Md., will entertain 20 Englishmen and women in uniform at a Christmas Day dinner. They will include members of the Auxiliary Terrntorial Services and of the British Army Staff. The hosts also are hoping to find some British tars to come along, too.

"We get a real kick out of doing things like this," McDonald said yesterday, and went on to say that his women guests would receive Christmas gifts of cosmetics, and the men, khaki service neckties. The Christmas dinner table will be trimmed with American and British flags.

McDonald, who was born in San Francisco of Irish lineage, for several years operated a locksmith shop at 11th and H sts. nw. He and his wife are members of the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church.

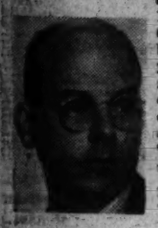
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Air Service Command Reducing Personnel

The Air Service Command, the Nation's largest single employer, is reducing its personnel. It has more than 300,000 employes, and a drop of between 13,000 and 15,000 is promised before the New year. No wholesale layoff will occur, as turnover will take care of the cut. The ASC is a unit within the Army Air Forces which reported its first personnel reduction in years during October.



Federal agencies are giving their employes annual leave so they can do their Christmas shopping. National Housing employes are being given a half a day, chargeable to annual leave, of course . . . Check-cashing troubles are over at the Navy annex in Arlington. The Arlington Trust Co. has set up a branch bank in the building.

COMEDY OF ERRORS: Federal Housing form 841-A emphasizes accuracy by employes. "Assuming that a given form is filled out or a given letter composed by the employe," the instructions read, "is the work of the employe reviewed for typographical errors, for grammatical errors, for errors in interpretations of REGUALTIONS or matters of policy?". I guess that must be a new way to spell regulations. . . . LIQUOR NOTE: When Wendell Berge was appointed chief of Justice's Anti-Trust Division his friends in the department wanted to toss him a cocktail party. But for months they were told: "Sorry, no room available, no liquor" or some other excuse. Then Berge revealed that his office was investigating the liquor shortage and within a few hours a room became available and the party was held the other day.

The GOVERNMENT GIRL CLUB will sponsor a wartime clothes show. It's tentatively set for January 24 in the Departmental auditorium. Government girls will be shown how they can dress well and be happy on their salaries. Headliners also are being lined up to entertain the girls. Models for the show—about 50 of them—will be selected Tuesday night in the recreation hall at Arlington Farms, the big dormitory for Government girls, which is located across the Memorial Bridge in Virginia. A committee of prominent artists will make the selections. Door prizes will be awarded. You'll be certain to see the show if you're selected as a model. The demand for seats has exceeded the limited supply. All types of girls will be selected and you'll have as good a chance to be chosen as any glamour girl. The time is 7 o'clock at Arlington Farms, and you're invited.

Teresa Bulness, Treasury Department statistical clerk, is one of the dozen career girls who were chosen by Glamour Magazine to attend a conference in New York this weekend to discuss wartime problems of business women . . . Paul H. Sanders of the Geological Survey, is the new president of the Federal Club. Vice presidents are George Bonnet of Selective Service and Judge Barse of the District Court. William Price of ODT is treasurer, and Charles Benner of Civil Service is secretary . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee meets today . . . War Production Board has lost 170 dollar-a-year men within the past year. W. Beverly Murphy, deputy vice chairman for production, is expected to be the next big businessman to leave the agency . . . The Bureau of Mines plans to send several of its experts to Sicily to find out about its mineral resources.

Administrator Hancock of Farm Security, is making an inquiry into political activity on the part of FSA employes. It seems that Senator Nye got a copy of a letter sent out to Missouri FSA supervisors in which it said in part: ". . . there is considerable interest on the part of various committees in Congress to find evidence of possible violation of the Hatch Act . . . We are suggesting that you go through files and remove such items as you may find relative to public relations which indicate some attempt may be made to influence certain people or certain groups of people toward FSA by writing to their Congressman and Senator." Hancock, a new appointee, will make a report to Nye, who is a supporter of FSA. The Senator said he didn't want to see FSA destroyed but things of this sort would lead to its destruction. The Senate, incidentally, gave FSA enough money to keep its present staff intact.

Oscar Cox, general counsel of Foreign Economic Administration, has a prize memento in his letter from President Roosevelt in which his resignation as assistant solicitor general was accepted. The letter was dated December 7, the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, and it was written somewhere in the Middle East. Cox received a photostat of the letter via V-mail . . . "Lice and Man" is the name of the first publication issued by the reorganized Agriculture Department Library, it's revealed in the department's annual report . . . Navy Department soon will announce awards to civilian employes for outstanding work.

Home Rules Predominate At Hearing

By Anne Hagner

Advocates of District home-rule yesterday dominated the fourth session of Senate District subcommittee hearings on Chairman McCarran's bill granting Washingtonians the right to vote for a seven-man board of commissioners.

With the support of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, the League of Women Voters, the National Council of Jewish Women, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Washington Central Labor Union and the United Office and Professional Workers added to the list, only dissenting voice heard thus far remained the Washington Board of Trade, whose representative was heard a week ago.

Mrs. Marvel Ball, spokesman for the United Office and Professional Workers of America, a CIO affiliate, cited Representative D'Alesandro's report last June on the "sordid" state of Washington's public health as a forceful argument in favor of change in local administration.

Overcrowding Assailed

She recalled the increase in venereal diseases, presence of rats carrying typhus germs, active tuberculosis cases among new arrivals to the city, increase in meningitis, malaria-carrying mosquitos, and increase in respiratory diseases because of overcrowding.

George N. Brown, 1357 Euclid st. nw., speaking in behalf of the Columbia Heights group, entered an earnest plea for both home rule and national representation, declaring: "There is no reason why thousands of our men fighting overseas should be denied the privilege of the ballot."

A member of the Board of Trade, Brown hit the "rubber stamp method" which, he said, was used by that body in adopting its resolution opposing the McCarran measure.

Old Clipping Produced

He entered in the record a 10-year-old newspaper article which stated that legislation for the District at that time cost the Federal Government $125,000 daily, in requiring congressional action on local matters.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, a member of both the League of Women Voters and the National Council of Jewish Women, told McCarran and Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, only two subcommittee members present, that "past confusion" in the city's child welfare problem was adequate proof of need for "a good, sound business government."

Leon A. Ransom, speaking for the local chapter of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, testified that the Negro population here has remained "fairly static" since pre-World War I days, maintaining an average of from 27 to 35 per cent of the population.

He asserted that his organization was in full agreement with the principles of the McCarran bill, but suggested several changes:

1. Abolition of the ward system, on the grounds that it might foster "all the evils of political trickery and ward-heeling";

2. Change of terminology from commissioners to councilmen, all of whom, he said, should be elected at large;

3. Election instead of appointment of city manager;

4. Reduction in the salaries of council members to $4500, instead of $8000 provided in the bill;

5. Enactment of all legislation by the council except in the case of majority action by the House and Senate District Committees.

The hearings will continue at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Coffee Supplants Mahon

The appointment of Representative Coffee (Democrat) of Washington as chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee to handle the District budget was announced yesterday to supplant the former head, Representative Mahon (Democrat) of Texas, who resigned last week.

Coffee, a lawyer before his election to Congress, declared that he would follow as closely as possible the principles of his predecessor in cooperating with the local administration.

He also went on record as being convinced of the right of District citizens to vote, on the basis that depriving them of suffrage was "taxation without representation."

"Suffrage in Washington," he predicted, "will come in time as the public is enlightened. I believe that it will have to be done by constitutional amendment, but I feel confident that the day is not far away."

He added that he felt confident that, with some exceptions, public welfare locally is "extremely well run," emphasizing the excellence of the school system, which, he said, is "one of the finest in the Nation."

Clothes Were Won In Crap Game, Says Accused Man

The police called it larceny, but Luchis McClinton, 30, Negro, called it an honest game of craps.

McClinton was charged in Municipal Court with stealing the clothes he was wearing from Oscar Lee in the latter's barber shop at 36 G st. nw.

As McClinton put it, "I was playing craps and beside this hat and coat I also won he barber shop."

As Judge Armond Scott put it, "Held for grand jury action under $5000 bond."

MADELEINE CARROLL

Madeleine Carroll, former screen actress, whose husband is serving overseas and whose sister was killed in the London blitz, began training here Monday for her "duration" career as a Red Cross overseas hospital staff aide with the expressed hope that the Red Cross will use "150 per cent" of her energy and ability.

Mentioning none of the personal reasons that led to her decision to dedicate herself fully to the war effort, Miss Carroll said simply, "I have been working a year and a half with the merchant seaman's service and now I feel as if they do not need me as much."

She indicated she wanted to be placed where she could be of maximum service.

No Reference to Revenge

At an informal press interview after she left a class room lecture at the American University "college" for the Red Cross, Miss Carroll made no reference to the fact she had once promised to avenge her sister's death. She did refer, however, to her husband, Second Lieut. John Hamilton, USMC, known to filmdom as Stirling Hayden, who is now overseas and to the fact that her chateau in France has been housing 200 French children for four years.

As a hospital staff aide, Miss Carroll, whose last picture was "My Favorite Blonde," will probably become just that to the wounded boys for whom, she said, "I expect to write letters home to their parents and friends." She also will read aloud to them.

Both Changed Names

Miss Carroll registered with the Red Cross as Mrs. Madeleine Hamilton. She attended classes yesterday in a brown suit and hat and black walking shoes, but during her last and fourth week she will wear her gray Red Cross uniform. The half-French, half-Irish actress registered as Mrs. Hamilton in view of the fact that she and her husband changed their names some months before he joined the Marines.

Although Miss Carroll had preferences to where she would like to be assigned, superstitious, she would not mention them.

Miss Carroll will remain at the Red Cross "college" at American University for a month, and then will be assigned to an American hospital until she is transported to an overseas war theater. While at the university she will live in a dormitory, sharing a room with two other girls.

Although she did not mention it, there is always the chance she might be sent somewhere near Lieutenant Hamilton, who is so far away "it will take six or eight months before he hears that I have joined the Red Cross."

J. M. Brinker Freed Of Larceny Charges

Joseph M. Brinker, 52, was found innocent by a directed verdict in District Court yesterday of a charge of grand larceny, embezzlement, and larceny after trust. Brinker was charged with taking $1,200 for the construction of a house on Staten Island, from an elderly woman here. During the trial, it developed the money was taken as a loan.

Dinner at College

Dunbarton College of Holy Cross, which will close Friday for the holidays, will give a Christmas dinner for resident students and faculty tomorrow.

Hod Carrier Union Record Called 'Open'

By Joseph Paull

Vincent Morreale, general counsel of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, offered yetserday to open the books and financial records of his union in defense of charges that the parent union of 450,000 workers condoned the actions of fugitive Larry Kelly, who left town while a special grand jury was investigating the shortage of more than $100,000 he allegedly left behind.

Morreale sat back in a comfortable chair in the sumptuous offices of the union at 815 15th st. nw., and said the records were open whether or not Congress passed bills calling for them.

"You've got to understand," he told a reporter, "that this union is composed of workers on the bottom. Before Joseph Moreschi rose, the union was small and powerless. In the South, before we began organizing, conditions were terrible, but now there are decent standards of living."

Lauds Moreschi

Morreale defied anyone to question Moreschi's character, stating only "innuendo" had been made so far.

Morreale said conventions were expensive to local unions which discouraged them. From other sources it was learned that on the scale the Washington Local 74 spent money on conventions he was indeed right. To Kelly and two laborers here went $1000 each to go to Toronto for a convention of the American Federation of Labor last year.

He said the difficulty here was based on the fact that the union recognizes—and the courts insist—that local unions are to be for the most part autonomous.

"While Kelly was maneuvering a building fund here to his own benefit, not one member complained," the counsel said. It wasn't until after Moreschi had taken action that complaints were made.

In the meantime however, there was considerable publicity over the situation, and by the time Moreschi preferred charges, the District Grand Jury, under direction of Assistant United States Attorney, John Fihelly, had been sitting here for two months on the case and was about to summon Moreschi to testify.

Waiver Refusal Explained

Morrele gave a novel excuse for Moreschi's refusal to sign a waiver of immunity before the grand jury so that an indictment might result if the grand jury thought it warranted.

"Moreschi thought it best—and it was on his own since he never consulted me—that since he was also conducting an independent investigation, it would not serve any purpose for him to sign the waiver of his constitutional right. But we have assisted Fihelly in every way."

"After all, it wouldn't help our case from a monetary point of view whether we found Larry Kelly," he said.

And he placed the whole blame on Kelly, stating Kelly had been kicked out of the union when finally found out.

Pupils to Give Ornaments For Yule Tree

Arrangements for District school children to contribute ornaments for the Community Christmas tree on the White House lawn were announced yesterday at a meeting of the executive board for the celebration. The decorations, which will be collected through the schools by the District Recreation Department, will be placed in honor of relatives serving with the armed service.

Tentative plans for a program consisting of musical numbers by the Marine Band, songs by the Navy School of Music Choir, and carols by the audience were made for the celebration which is expected to held at 3:15 p. m. on the day before Christmas.

The President's speech to the armed forces will be amplified, and representatives of the Boy and Girl Scouts will send greetings to the President. As in previous years, it is expected that the south grounds of the White House lot will be open to the public.

At a meeting of the Recreation Board preceding the executive session funds were transferred from the board to the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission for the construction of four field houses for the Congress Heights, Sherwood, Randle, and Edgewood playgrounds. One of the houses will be fitted with removable panels as an experiment for all seasonal use.

200 Hecht Co. Employes Will Get Yule Bonuses

More than 200 employes of the Hecht Co. will receive Christmas bonuses, Charles B. Dulcan, vice president and general manager, announced yesterday.

The Christmas funds will be distributed proportionately among the employes in accordance with their length of service, Dulcan said.

600-Page Book Describes D. C. Government

(The seventh and last of a series—A primer of District government.)

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Recommended reading for Washingtonians who would like to know just how the District Government works is a formidable book of 600 pages entitled "District of Columbia Appropriation Bill for 1944," with the subtitle "Hearings before the Sub-Committee on Appropriation Bill for 1944," with the subtitle "Hearings Before the Subcommittee on Appropriations, the House of Representatives."

In it, the names of Commissioners John Russell Young, Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz appear frequently.

It must be borne in mind, however, that Young with his 17 departments, Mason with his 14 and Kutz with his 11, have most of their responsibilities met by the men and women who head the functions which are their special assignment.

Law Limits Action

The Commissioners don't even have to ponder problems of policy or initiate actions requiring independent thinking. For policy and action are limited by Federal laws.

Their jobs resolve into gestures of compliance with old statutes that may or may not be geared to the realities of modern life.

It is not implied that Commissioners don't work. They do.

It is open to question, however, whether there need be three of them when their administrative problems are predigested for them and they have no power of policy-making.

After a thorough investigation of the work in the District Building, this reporter believes that some 30 per cent of the District personnel could be released to wartime duties without impairing what he found to be a leisurely routine, and without appreciably affecting the total of work produced on behalf of the taxpayers.

Like any other organizational setup, District government is made up of a variety of services and responsibilities. And, like any other organization, repetition of motions has tended to develop an almost automatic operation.

There are certain specific obligations that must be met, and there are sufficient numbers of District employes who will meet them.

Men Who Do Work

As far as the Commissioners are concerned, they have only nominal responsibility. There is little they can do to change the routine.

We now get back to the formidable book in which is printed the record of hearings on the proposed budget.

The book is the payoff because, more than any other survey of the District government, it shows who actually are the men who make it tick.

Item by item of proposed expenditures must be explained to the congressional committee. Congress has the last word. The commissioners may pull some strings.

But it is the department heads, the men who have worked out the budget, the officials who run the machine that keeps this city going, whom Congress calls in for explanations.

And Congress, Washingtonians, is your city council. This Nation's legislative body, with all its domestic and international problems at hand, is the power that decides about your water mains and fire trucks.

Visitors to the Sky-Roads Exhibit, which will be opened this morning at 10 o'clock in the auditorium of the Department of Commerce, will hardly realize that the "air age" they will see illustrated in maps, globes, pictures, and models was ushered in only 40 years ago by the inventive genius of the Wright brothers.

Orville Wright, the surviving co-inventor of the heavier-than-air machine, will be feted Friday night at a dinner at the Statler Hotel in one of his rare public appearances.

The dinner, to be attended by 800 leaders of the Nation's military and civil aviation, will celebrate the first airplane flight on December 17, 1903.

In the meantime, United Air Lines yesterday published a petition by "hundreds of United's personnel" to Orville Wright asking his intervention to have the first successful flying machine, which is now in a museum in England, returned to this country after the war.

Wright's permission to get the machine back to this country was asked as "tangible proof of this Nation's role in pioneering aviation 40 years ago."

The exhibit will be open daily for an indefinite period from 10 a. m.

Store Clerk Held For Grand Jury In Pastor's Death

Buckingham, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—A Buckingham County grand jury will consider the case of Leroy Gough, store clerk, charged with inflicting injuries resulting in the death of the Rev. Noel J. Allen, as a result of Trial Justice Court action today.

The case was sent to the grand jury after a preliminary hearing during which witnesses were heard concerning details of an alleged altercation between Gough and the aged minister.

Allen, an advocate of extreme conservation of wildlife and known locally as the "Billy Sunday of Wildlife Conservation," died November 26. A coroner's verdict said he succumbed to injuries received during an altercation with Gough at a Sprouses Corner store on November 23.

Gough was arrested later on a warrant charging him with the death of the Rev. Mr. Allen, who was 74 years of age. He was subsequently released on $5000 bond for his appearance at the preliminary hearing held today before Trial Justice G. M. Rogers.

Black Market Shells Hunted In Boy's Death

A "black market" .22-caliber bullet fired from the gun of "a city sportsman customer of illegal dealers in shells" was yesterday tentatively blamed for the mystery slaying of 14-year-old Robert Redmiles in front of his North Laurel, Md., home Sunday afternoon.

The decision was announced by Maryland Troopers Sergt. B. J. Nolan and John Daud shortly after they had been informed that the gun found in the boy's home with one shot missing was not the death gun. The FBI investigated and its ballistics experts informed Nolan and Daud that the fatal bullet had not come from the boy's rifle. The FBI also said six other guns, belonging to friends of the dead youth, could not be associated with the bullet.

The FBI described the bullet as the same type used by Jap snipers in the Southwest Pacific. They said it was "probably" made by a domestic arms manufacturer in New England.

Both Nolan and Daud said they would "collect all the .22-caliber guns for miles about and submit them to the FBI in a further attempt to locate the gun and its owner." The FBI said it would cooperate.

Daud said the bullet could not have traveled from the Fort Meade rifle range. It is 3 miles from the scene, he said.

Meanwhile, Robert's body was to be interred this afternoon in Ivy Hill Cemetery in North Laurel after services at the Kiser funeral home at 2:30 o'clock.

The youth fell in a dying condition as he walked with seven other boys. Where he fell is Howard County. He was taken over the line into Prince Georges County, where a doctor who treated him thought he had a heart attack, supposing the head wound was because of the fall.

Violation of Rent Ceiling Denied

Charles M. Nash, real estate operator of 5500 Wriley rd., Westhaven, was on trial yesterday in Municipal Court on a charge of violating the Emergency Rent Control Act by receiving $33 monthly for the rent of a four-room residence in Snow's Court, which had a ceiling rent of $12.50.

Nash denied he had violated the rent ceiling, stating the rent control authorities had mistakenly computed the ceiling price.

Students to Get Overdue Pay At St. Elizabeths Immediately

Checks for some 100 student male and female nurses at St. Elizabeths Hospital are expected to be made out immediately, following the decision of the Comptroller General's office which was sent to the Federal Security Agency yesterday and will be forwarded by the general counsel to the hospital today.

Nurses have been without pay since November 1, when doubt arose in the minds of hospital officials as to the legal status of this group.

The content of the decision by the Comptroller General could not be learned last night. An FSA spokesman said that the six-page legal document came in shortly before closing of office hours and that he was unable to ascertain the exact meaning of the various points without counsel's advice.

The Comptroller General's opinion, it was understood, divided the group into several groups and ordered them treated differently.

The FSA spokesman said the agency's general counsel will forward the document with his own comment and "advice" to the hospital today.

Owners Believe Lost Dog Was Shot

A thorough search for Skipper, a white English pointer with lemon-colored markings on his head, left side and left flank, failed to locate the dog yesterday and his owners, Col. and Mrs. J. C. Hill, 1528 28th st. se., were sure that it was their pet that had been shot several days ago on the grounds of the Soldiers' Home.

Skipper set out from Seattle, November 29 by way of Railway Express and arrived in Washington, December 4, completing the last lap of a long journey that began in Alaska. He has been missing since his arrival here.

Mrs. Hill said yesterday that although both she and her husband kept in constant touch with the Railway Express Co., they were not notified of the dog's disappearance until Monday.

According to the Railway Express Co., the door of Skipper's crate was opened while he was being moved and he got away. The Hills notified police who promised to look for the dog, but a check of the precincts yesterday showed that he had not been seen anywhere.

A report at the Tenth Precinct station disclosed a "white mongrel hound with brown spots" was shot by Sergt. L. A. Grubb of the Soldiers' Home force, last Wednesday. The dog, it was said, had bitten another Home policeman, Fred L. Collins.

D. C. Control Of Venereal Disease Gains

Control of venereal disease and prostitution through police action and clinical treatment have been so effective in the past year that Washington now rates as "one of the cleaner large cities of the country," a year-end report to the board of directors by Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Social Hygiene Society, revealed yesterday.

"Washington's venereal disease and prostitution situations are being handled as well as, or better, than those of comparable cities," it was stated.

Attention, however, must now be drawn to the factors responsible for the high prevalence of venereal disease in the Negro population, the report pointed out, citing Health Department figures showing that of a total of 6279 syphilis cases treated in Washington clinics in the past year, 91.5 per cent, or 5740 were colored.

Pointing to the fact that "a far higher proportion of Negroes than whites are in such low-income brackets that they must go to clinics or remain untreated," the report states:

"Just as long as the incidence of tuberculosis, venereal disease, illegitimacy and other physical and societal maladies continued many times higher in the Negro group than in the neighboring population, just so long should we concentrate more medical, educational and economic thereapy to improve their lot."

There is nothing "altruistic" in this process, Everett stated. "The measures can be justified on a dollars-and-cents basis in that they will reduce the total of community ills," he said. "In the long run prevention is much cheaper than salvage."

With completion of the new 50-bed wing at Gallinger Hospital for patients acutely infected with veneral disease, Washington will have 100 hospital beds for quarantine of such patients.

Ihlder Asks NCHA Study By Agencies

All agencies "whose work brings them in contact with what we are doing," were invited yesterday by John Ihlder, executive director of the National Housing Authority, to follow the example of the Washington Building Congress which will investigate shortly the work and program of NCHA.

"We want them to evaluate our work," Ihlder declared, reiterating that the authority's slum clearance and low-cost public housing are entirely in the public interest, and do not conflict with private industry in the housing field.

Messages urging "frank and open" investigation and discussion already have been sent to the Washington Board of Trade and the Real Estate Board, as well as to civic, social and health agencies.

The Senate District Committee has completed eight tours of NCHA-built projects, and Ihlder hopes for an early hearing to determine the future of the authority. He has suggested several witnesses for this hearing, he said, including persons who have attacked the authority, and public housing in general.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl of 26 Has Posed for Years as Man-Hater, With the Result That Men Now Avoid Her; She Repents Pose; Yearns for Marriage; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is myself. I am approaching 26; and from the time I was a teen-age girl, I have had a horror of any member of the opposite sex getting an idea that I was pursuing him, or dying of love for him. I have seen other girls behaving thus and the spectacle was sickening, to me. So I adopted an "attitude" toward men, which consisted of ignoring them, laughing at them, ridiculing them, antagonizing them, etc.,—anything to dispel such an idea as the above from their mind.

Needless to say, I have never dated to any extent. I have had about five beaux in my life, although secretly I have been fond of about five times that many. When I was younger, I could get away with my nastiness more easily. Young boys are intrigued by aloof, haughty girls to some extent. And even today, men when they first meet me seem interested in knowing me better. But by the second or third meeting, they are quite willing, even anxious, to depart from my presence.

Maybe I have grown up too late; but all of a sudden I know I would like very much to marry and have a home and at least one child. I am not exceptionally beautiful nor well dressed; nor intelligent, as I am sure you will agree. And there is my adopted "attitude," now unfortunately very much a part of me. Must I lie in the bed which I have so industriously made for myself, all these years? Or do you think there is yet a chance for me to find an impressionable man somewhere and convince him that I do like him,—evidence to the contrary notwithstanding? I will appreciate your reply,—even if the most you can say is that I am a case of arrested development, as I already strongly suspect.

F. M. T.

Phoney Performance . Borrowed From Past

DEAR F. M. T.: Your make-believe attitude of scornful indifference to the opposite sex didn't come to you out of the blue. It is a phoney performance borrowed from the nineteenth century; and the seeds of it probably were sowed in your mind by your mother's, or your aunts' or your grandmothers' implied or outspoken theories concerning "fitten" conduct on the part of maidens when dealing with swains. It dates back to an era when the genteel female response to a proposal of marriage chungrily anticipated though it may have been) was: "Oh, Mr. Whoosis! This is so sudden!"

As a rule, the more brittle this attitude of camouflage, the more intensely amorous and sentimental, in essence, is the repressed actress behind the mask. Thus, nothing could have been more foreign to your nature, its biologic needs and impulses, than this self-defeating pretense of hoity-toity frigidity you have maintained so long. You have not "all of a sudden" grown up to realize you want very much to marry and have a home and a child. Rather, you have reached a point where you can no longer support this painful hypocrisy, which does such violence to your natural feelings and commendable secret hopes.

Time to Face Fears And Cast Them Out

YET EVEN NOW, so apologetic and sheepish is your longing for love, you can't bring yourself to come out point-blank with the statement, "I want my man:" or "I want to be loved." Instead, you sidle up to the truth by saying, old fogeyishly, that you want to be married and have a home and a child.—thus continuing to express, by implication, a feigned disinterest in matehood itself: which of course is the experience you need to relax your psychological tensions and precipitate the development of emotional poise, and thus restore you to your natural self.

For the time being, your only hope of getting back "on the beam" that may lead to happy self-realization, in love and marriage, consists in honestly acknowledging to yourself at least, the saving truth that you have a sneaking sympathy with the girls who make spectacles of themselves running after the man they want. And that your stiff-necked performance to the contrary, and sniffy deprecation of their tactics, are inverse expressions of cowardice and envy. You are afraid (as they are not) to run the race in public and maybe miss the prize!

Better Be Natural Than Trade in Wiles

HAVING ACCEPTED this truth, together with the facts (1) that it is right and proper, and by no means disreputable, to want to give and have love; and (2) that it is both human and admirable to strive openly and industriously to realize one's rightful ambitions; and (3) only ignominous to be afraid to try valorously to make one's dreams come true, and shameful to be dishonest in relation to oneself and others; and (4) that nothing more becomes a woman, or more endears her to man, than consistent sunny, deferential graciousness of manner, whether dealing with her own or the opposite sex,—having digested all this, you should throw off the emotional straitjacket you have been floundering about in for so long, and let your natural radiance shine. Your salvation does not depend upon finding an impressionable man somewhere, and working artful wiles on him. It depends entirely on "getting right" with yourself; and thereafter buoyantly exemplifying good humored love of your fellow man in all your social relations.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Fat Pads Are Sign of Poor Circulation

By Ida Jean Kain

You may be out of shape in your clothes even though you are not overweight. Fat tends to collect where the circulation is poor. If you sit most of the time, your circulation slows up in the hips and thighs and that is right where the fat cells settle.

You don't want a diet. That might only make matters worse by lowering your vitality, which would further decrease muscle tone. What you need is better circulation, and there are a number of ways of getting it.

Pummeling Will Help

A hot, then cold, shower is excellent and it helps to use a bath brush (not too vigorously) on the lumpy spots. Pummelling is another means of bringing the blood to the surface. Double up your fists and without going at it too hard, beat a tattoo along the outer hip and thigh lines where the fat has settled in annoying little mounds.

A nurse I know smoothed these measurements by following her bath with massage. She applied cream to her hands and starting with hands on the waist at each side, thumbs front, bent her knees, and stroked downward firmly along hips and thighs.

Massage by Rolling

Exercise will stimulate the circulation, and you can't beat it. Rolling is really a combination of massage and exercise. The massage comes in when you roll directly on the pads and it has a smoothing effect. Lie full length on the floor on your back and roll completely over on your stomach and over on the other side, then back.

The exercise technique for slimming hips and thighs is a forward and back swing of the legs from the hips, and a side-to-side swing or circling (also from the hips) to reach inner and outer thigh muscles. To slim both measurements, lie on the floor and make big circles with the top leg, from the hip, 12 times in one direction. Reverse for 12 more, change sides and repeat.

Park View Club Holds Yule Party

The Park View Woman's Club opened the holiday season last night with a novel "Star" Christmas party at the home of the junior past president, Mrs. W. O. Gale, 4911 Illinois ave. nw.

Mrs. A. H. O. Rolle, program chairman, chose as the motif of her party "the Christmas star" and this theme recurred in many forms throughout the evening.

A short business session was held with the president, Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn, in the chair. Mrs. Ashburn set the tempo of the party by quoting "Seek Him that maketh the Seven Stars and death into the morning," foldeath into the morning,'" followed by other beautiful and unusual "star" quotations.

Packages for Veterans

Christmas projects were under the direction of Mrs. W. O. Hancock, philanthropic chairman, who recently received a General Federation pin from the club in recognition of her outstanding Red Cross work. Gift packages were sent to veterans at Mount Alto Hospital, and holiday money gifts and boxes of food will be given to friends. Members assisted in selling tuberculosis stamps. In cooperation with "Gifts for Yanks," four servicemen in California, Florida, North and South Carolina were sent Christmas boxes.

As the festivities began, lights were lowered and the program went on under pale blue and silver beams reminiscent of the star light of Christmas night. Small stars sparkled around the brilliant Bethlehem star. Green bowers decorated the room from which hung showers of silver stars on blue ribbon.

Christmas Music

Miss Joanna Floyd, vibra-harp soloist, who has recently entertained at many Washington parties, and her sister, Miss Ruth Floyd, presented a program of Christmas music in which selections about the Christmas star predominated. Mrs. Ruth Stitt told the ever appealing story of Christmas, "Why the Chimes Rang." The star program was extended in meaning to include the stars of our flag. As a dramatic closing selection, the Misses Floyd presented the timely song from Deanna Durbin's latest picture, "When They Play the Star-Spangled Banner, Say a Prayer for the Boys Over There." During this number a beautiful flag was unfurled by Mrs. E. P. Folliard, custodian of the flag, and the assembly rose to honor the flag and the men and women of our armed services.

The buffet supper table shone with tiny stars and blue and silver decorations, and was lighted with immense candles, centered with a blue and silver Christmas tree. Refreshments were served by Mrs. George W. Evans, Mrs. Charles Robbins, Mrs. John McKay, Mrs. Margaret Hudson, Mrs. Ruth Stitt, and Mrs. Edward Folliard.

Blue and white wrapped gifts for each guest were brought in a star-decorated container, and as they were distributed, the guests joined in Christmas carols and holiday greetings.

Gulick Talks To League On UNRRA

By Genevieve Reynolds

One of the greatest achievements of the UNRRA conference held in Atlantic City recently is the proof that when international groups are thrown together on a job, they can return home with a solution to the problem. So declared Dr. Luther Gulick, Administration research, tax and public services expert, guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters held yesterday at the Central YWCA.

Giving a few insights into the recent conventions, he told how many of the college professors declared that the rehabilitation work could not be run on a business basis and should be more idealistic. But in the end they offered no better solution and conceded that the businesslike arrangement on which the conference was organized was the best plan. The former Columbia, Yale and Chicago professor, Dr. Gulick, made it clear that positions in the UNRRA organizations would not be a matter of political log rolling but given to those best qualified to handle the work.

Dr. Gulick conservatively estimated the displaced peoples of Europe at 14 millions, excluding those in Russia and the armed forces of the various countries. What with railroads put out of order, movement of troops back home, loss of ration cards and work certificates, he declared that it would take years for all the enslaved peoples to reach their homes again.

Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president of the league, presided, and Mrs. Harvey Becknell, chairman of the Foreign Policy Project, introduced the speaker.

Guests at the head table, in addition to the speaker, included Mrs. Herbert Hirsch, Mrs. Myron Folk and Mrs. Max O'Lorenz.

Native and Original Design Comes From Block Printing

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Shortages of manufactured goods are putting American women on their mettle—once more they're creating their own designs for the things they use in their homes. And that's good news for American design, for that's how a native and original design vernacular develops—not by artists working in ivory towers, but by You, Mrs. Lady-down-the-street.

Don't be discouraged just because you've never designed anything with a capital D before. Just remember the nice things your great-grandmothers used to make in pioneer days in America. And think of how much your descendants will treasure a hand-made bit from your own hands.

It's a Rewarding Craft

Block printing is a rewarding sort of thing to start on. You may make interesting table mats, napkins and cushion tops. When your skill is reliable you can try your hand at things like bedspreads or curtains and tablecloths.

Start out with simple motifs, and stick to friendly themes instead of attempting anything on the elegant side. Remember that block printing is informal and makes no pretense of being la-de-da.

There's gaiety and individuality in motifs like scissors and spools of thread, in school books and spectacles, in a clothesline with a wash waving in the breeze, in a teapot with a cup and saucer, in a row of cut-out paper dolls with their hands joined. If you've had any experience, of course, you can attempt more intricate designs, but never try formal patterns for this medium.

Remember the Ancients

Plain unpretentious cotton fabrics are best for block printing—unbleached muslin is especially good, and linoleum are most popular for the printing.

There are special tools for cutting out the blocks, and many art departments in the big stores as well as smaller art shops still have these tools. If you can't find the proper tools, remember that the ancients made lovely designs without modern gadgets. In a pinch a sharp pen knife may be used for the job.

The proper colors for this work can also be found in certain art stores, though, of course, don't expect peace-time assortments of shades! For detailed directions most public libraries have books with accurate instructions on how to proceed with block printing.

The fad for rustice designs is gayly expressed here in table linens. The nonchalant cow could be used either for a table mat or napwins

M. Milhaud, Noted Musician To Speak Here

Darius Milhaud, one of the best known to French composers, will be in Washington on Saturday to give a talk on "Music and the Theater," his experiences and memories, at a late afternoon party to be given by Henri Hoppenot, French Minister of the Committee of National Liberation, and Mme. Hoppenot, at their home on Massachusetts ave.

M. Milhaud and M. Hoppenot are old friends. When Darius Milhaud composed his three operas, known as minute operas, for they are performed in that space of time, it was Henri Hoppenot who wrote the libretto. Paul Claudel, former French Ambassador, and a recognized poet, has also written lyrics for several of M. Milhaud's works.

Born in Aix-en-Provence in Southern France, M. Milhaud left his country following the Armistice with Nazi Germany. He eventually came to the United States, was offered and accepted the chair of music at Mills College in California. His music is more or less familiar in this country for it has been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Serge Koussevitsky, and by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony. A member of the association of French composers known as "The Six," M. Milhaud was, until war intervened, turning to modern music, and had been writing music for French films.

Luckenbill will be down from New York with her two children, Mary Louise, who is now 2½ years old, and 6-week-old Thomas David, jr. Thomas David, sr., will join them here for Christmas Day celebration and be back on his job shortly thereafter.

Pet Portrait Painter

Gladys Emerson Cook, Noted Artist, Is Exceptional Portrayer of Animals; Wild, Tame

By Elizabeth Henney

"I believe the most noted one who has sat for a portrait by me is 'Selassie,' Fannie Hurst's red Persian cat." It was Gladys Emerson Cook speaking, whose present exhibit of animal portraits at the Arts Club here would do credit to a Rosa Bonheur.

"Selassie, by the way" went on Miss Cook, "is certainly doing his bit for the war effort. He is the demonstration cat for the ASPCA in New York, and in the manner of a veteran, allows himself to be put through a performance destined to show how to care for pets during an air raid. He is splinted and bandaged during every demonstration, and actually seems to enjoy it."

Down from New York, to open her show, Miss Cook has interesting stories to tell of her adventures in the animal world. Already recognized as an expert on animals and an exceptional portrayer of them, she has risen to fame in that field in a comparatively short time.

Her interest in animals extends back, however, to the time when she first toddled out the front door of her childhood home in Haverhill, Mass., and brought in a stray cat, which she immediately tried to draw. With her inherited background, she did a pretty good job at the first attempt and has been at it ever since.

She is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Ward Cook, and her mother was an amateur artist of considerable ability. Though her father's business was real estate, he too dabbled in the arts and was constantly consulted by his clients on subjects of architecture and decoration.

Graduating from the University of Wisconsin, from which she holds a Master of Science degree, she went first to Hollywood as a fashion designer, where she dealt with costumes, both historical and modern on such plays as Anthony Adverse, and a number of musical comedy reviews.

But always the interest in the animals was in the back of her mind, and she took in every pet show, circus and zoo in the territory and sketched away. After three years she gave up Hollywood and came back to her first love, pet-painting.

GLADYS EMERSON COOK

She landed in New York and has been at it ever since, and in the past three years, she has chalked up an amazing record.

For instance, one of the managers of the circus noticed that she was a consistent attendant and was always sketching. He took a peek at her work and shortly thereafter she was asked to do the art work for their yearly program. She did the famous Carter's Ink advertisement of a mother cat and nine kittens in different colored inks; and last October gave a demonstration "chalk-talk" on "Drawing the Cat," in the Metropolitan Museum at the special request of the museum. Which seems to be a pretty fair record.

Add to that the fact that she has had two books of animals published, one "Hiram and Other Cats," which came out last year. The other, "Zoo Animals," a fascinating volume dealing with all the "big cats," came out this fall, intended for the Christmas sale season, but was sold out so fast that both she and the publishers have hardly gotten their breath yet about it; but a second edition is being rushed through as fast as possible.

Spirit of "Hands-Across-The-Sea" Resumes Rightful Significance As Friendly "Invasion" Gets Under Way

(This is the fourth in a series of articles on the British Influx to Washington—and its effect—in recent years.)

WITH THE CURRENT British Ambassador setting the example by increasing Anglo-American goodwill at every opportunity, the Third British Invasion of America is accomplishing its purpose in a manner that neither Washington nor the Embassy staff itself would have thought possible five years ago. Spreading outward and downward, intensifying as it moves, the spirit of "hands-across-the-sea" is resuming its rightful significance.

Traveling thousands of American miles in the past two years, the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax have displayed a superb brand of British salesmanship throughout the United States. Proof that the Ambassador has the "common touch" that so strongly appeals to Americans is evidenced in the success of each trip he takes across the country.

His visit to the deep South last year, for example, resulted in one triumph after another . . . for his cause. Down in Memphis, Tenn., they're still talking about one of his speeches, and how the city leaders thronged around him afterward, urging a return engagement. Shortly afterward, at a plantation gathering in Arkansas, a number of Negro singers of spirituals entertained him for hours, and following the program a Negro preacher came forth to voice a special welcome to the visitors. Said he, directing his speech to the Ambassador, "You's welcomed once, you's welcomed twice, and you's welcomed thrice . . . 'cause us folks down heah in Arkansas been waitin' a long time for de Lawd to come!"

AIDING LORD AND LADY HALIFAX is a staff of capable, intelligent, forward-looking men who have taken intelligent pains to make friends with Americans in all walks of life. The insouciance that characterized their predecesssors is entirely missing.

A few Washingtonians can remember when British diplomats drew "hill allowances"—special vacation pay that enabled His Majesty's servants to take to the hills in tropical climates during the torrid season. But provisions of that sort are very much a thing of the past. Recent years, members of the British Embassy staff have either stayed in Washington or made trips back home for official reports during vacation time.

Furthermore, they have worked hard . . . even as they seemed to play; for at every dinner, tea party or luncheon they happen to attend, they are making friends for their country. Like other wise diplomats they have long since learned that their Nation's business in Washington frequently can be carried on more effectively, and less obviously, over a dinner table than across an office desk.

Two bright young men who have made exceptional contributions toward clarifying and increasing Anglo-American goodwill are John Foster, now on leave of absence from his post as legal adviser and First Secretary at the British Embassy, and Isaiah Berlin, another First Secretary, who share a liking for informality, stimulating conversation, and hard-to-convince Americans. Neither is a career diplomat.

MR. FOSTER, WHO ARRIVED here in 1939, settled in a Georgetown house and began laying out an ingenuously planned British campaign. Wily, witty, and extremely personable, he was soon in great demand in Washington drawing rooms and was proving himself one of the most effectual bundles for Britain in the entire city. Tall, not too slick in appearance—the direct opposite of the trimly turned out, cane-carrying British diplomat of tradition—he talked easily and well; also listened attentively, and when necessary, met anti-British arguments with a minimum of noise and a maximum of logic. When he left for England a few months ago, he went with the satisfaction of knowing that as a wartime diplomat he had done a superb job in America.

"John Foster has made hundreds, literally hundreds, of highly important friends for his country in a comparatively short time," said Justice Thurman Arnold at a farewell party for Mr. Foster. "He can return to his homeland knowing nobody could have accomplished more."

When he left he promised to return to Washington in February. About the same time, however, rumors made the usual rounds that he was going home to stand for Parliament. I asked him about that just before he left, "I am not going to do that," he replied convincingly, "until after the war is over. I expect to be back here in the spring." Countless Washingtonians who are personally acquainted with him, and have great affection for him, hope that he will.

REMAINING ON DUTY in Washington is Mr. Berlin, who like Mr. Foster formerly taught at Oxford. Not long age he moved into a tiny brick house in Georgetown where he entertains at small and intimate parties some of Washington's most influential officials.

Another member of the British Embassy staff who has won friends for his country in a new and refreshing way in recent years is the one listed in the diplomatic blue book as Col. and Hon. Angus McDonnell, British Attache. American notables who squirmed in discomfiture at formal British Embassy dinners in the past have had the time of their lives at Colonel McDonnell's informal supper parties at which he wears an apron while greeting guests, and cooks and serves most of the meal himself.

Like most other parties given by Britishers in Washington since the advent of war, his suppers invariably are off-the-record . . . but each one draws as distinguished a company as you will find anywhere in Washington. A society reporter, having advance information on one of Colonel McDonnell's parties, once asked him something about his guest list.

"Oh, please, please don't mention the party at all," he begged. "It's small; very informal and very unimportant. And I don't want any publicity. Somebody will be sure to say I'm giving it on lend-lease funds!"

(The final article in this series will appear tomorrow.)

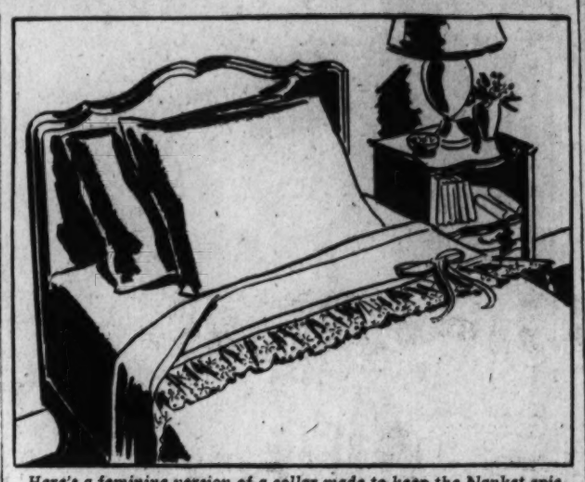
Give Pretty Protection to Blankets Through Use of Washable Collars

A scalloped blanket collar such as pictured is tailored enough so the masculine household members couldn't conscientiously object. A 72-inch wide blanket requires 2⅛ inches of 36-inch material. The collar is anchored to the blanket by buttons and buttonholes



Here's a feminine version of a collar made to keep the blanket spic and span. Eyelet embroidery edges the dimity collar.

By Martha Ellyn

This Christmas is going to be a practical one. Yet it should be a warm and merry one. It is important that the traditional spirit—with its full meaning—be maintained

Merchandise shortages are a too-real reality. So planning a gift list isn't as simple as in peacetime, or even as it was last year. To buy gifts that are not appropriate, just in order to give something, is especially foolish since stocks are greatly depleted.

With conservation the homemaker's watchword, why not lighten her load and surprise her with something both pretty and practical? Every home uses bed covers—blankets, quilts and comforts. An article used as constantly as a bed cover will become soiled. Dry cleaning is

Washable Collars

The top edge of the bed cover collects the most soil. A pretty, washable collar to cap the top of the cover both above and underneath can take up the soil. This will save cleaning and washing the cover, for the collar can be detached and washed. Not only are these bed clothes collars easy to make and simple to wash, but they can give that dressed-up look to the covers.

You can make them out of any kind of washable material available, and trim or adorn them as you wish. The tie-on kind is secured to the cover by tapes. A tape is sewed on the cover and the underneath part of the collar. The button-on type has button holes and fastens to the cover, which has buttons sewed to it. Sturdy snap fasteners can be used if you have a goodly supply of them.

These collars may be made with a feminine flair or in the tailored manner. The one essential, besides making them attractive, is that they be washable. Materials are none too plentiful. That you know if you have been to the cotton counter in recent weeks. But in event you can't find the material or color you desire, perhaps you can find it in a box in the attic or in whatever kind of a scrap bag you keep.

Consider Color Scheme

Whether you make white or colored collars is a matter of choice. But you should know the color scheme of the recipient's bed covers, if you are going to attempt making colored ones.

Voile, cheesecloth, percale, broadcloth, dimity, dotted swiss, peter pan, or any other cotton material available, will make both attractive and serviceable collars. You can scallop the material for the tailored variety. An eyelet embroidery edging is also attractive. If you want them more luxurious, use a soft silk-like material, such as washable rayon. You can even monogram the collars if you wish to personalize them. Show your creative ability in fashioning these collars. But above all remember to make them of washable material so they won't be gone with the first sudsing.

British Women Have 61-Hour Work Week

Women are working side by side with men at the great locomotive works of Britain's Southern Railway, turning out freight cars at the rate of one every half hour. Women are found in every part of this factory; in the brass foundry, which is white-hot with fire and buckets of molten metal, in the welders' shops and sawmills. They work a long week, too—61 hours, which means from 7:30 a. m. to 7 p. m. for five days, and on Saturday, 7:30 a. m. to 5 p. m.

According to the troops who receive these cars, "It is possible to erect them in 45 minutes each, with no workshop facilities and with only a few trained artisans, because of the good workmanship in them."

Milk Is Not the Perfect Food for Adults; Its Use Has Caused Disease, Physician Says

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

One of my correspondents writes that I have often expressed the opinion that milk is not a drink for adults. He wonders if this is a personal prejudice on my part.

I admit to the prejudice. I suppose I was given milk when I was a baby, but after I attained man's estate, I graduated to other beverages. I have not drunk a glass of raw milk for at least 55 years; except once about 10 years ago when I found it just as nauseating and insipid as I had always remembered.

In spite of this abnegation I have attained the age of 60 with a considerable modicum of health and vigor. I do not say that I am entirely free from all fleshly ills, but I seem to be just about as well off as the hygiene boys of my age, who have conscientiously engulfed a pint of milk a meal for half a century.

Dr. Osler's Statement

Perhaps I will break down and begin milk drinking soon. William Osler, one of the wisest of physicians, said that a man should go out of life as he came in on a diet of milk.

Of course, I admit immediately that considered from a nutritional standpoint, milk is the perfect food—almost! It has to be. Nature very obviously intended it as the sole article of diet for the animal in the most precarious period of its existence—the first few months. It contains all of the 30 to 35 elements or compounds necessary for growth and health.

One of these elements is calcium and two glasses of milk will provide a quantity of calcium which could scarcely be equaled by any combination of foods. Some young women studying nutrition recently volunteered to go on a 24-day diet devoid of milk.

They had to get their calcium from vegetables, and day after day they ate large quantities of carrots, cabbage, celery and lettuce (in addition to meat, cereal, potatoes, eggs and fruits.) Interest in their food died down long before they had finished their meal.

A Different Opinion

Again, let me emphasize that no nutritionist doubts that milk is the perfect food. It is admitted by all that cow's milk is deficient in iron and needs vitamin D. For the infant it must be modified in many ways.

But if you think that I am lukewarm about milk for adults you should hear my old friend, Dr. Horace Soper of St. Louis, on the subject. He really goes to town more or less to wit, saying it is unfit for adult consumption. His main objection is that raw milk is full of germs.

He says that germs have been cultivated from stomach ulcers which are the same as the germs in raw cow's milk. Same with tooth decay. Undulant fever is carried by milk. Pasteurization helps some but still pasteurized milk contains many bacteria. Evaporated milk is clean, but expensive. He concludes:

"All mammals, except man, cease the use of milk as a food after weaning. As a result of his violation of this primary biologic law man has been severely penalized by a host of infectious diseases."

Choral Society Acclaimed At Its Professional Debut

By Ray C. B. Brown

Louis A. Potter conducts the Washington Choral Society in a performance of Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus" on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloists: Marie Wilkins, Mary Van Kirk, Joseph Victor Delaroute and Glenn Darwin. Organist: J. Russell McKeever.

Eminently successful was the Washington Choral Society's first professional performance last evening in Constitution Hall where Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus" was sung with orchestra and organ support and a supplementary chorus of students from the public schools. Louis A. Potter, under whose directorship the organization has reached its present standard, may feel fully justified in his decision that the chorus is ready for independent existence after having given its services to the public for many years without recompense. While the audience was not as large as it should have been under the circumstances, it was sufficiently numerous and appreciative to make the occasion a notable one.

With the exception of "The Messiah," Handel's 32 oratorios are virtually unknown and the disclosure of "Judas Maccabaeus" must have been a pleasant surprise to those hearing it for the first time. A surprise, because of its masterly choral writing, its wealth of melody and its dramatic force. The concluding "Hallelujah! Amen!" has a massive effect that surpasses the famous "Hallelujah" that made an English king involuntarily stand in respectful homage.

Concert programs have made familiar "Arm, Arm, Ye Brave" and "Sound An Alarm," but these numbers pale in importance compared with the soprano aria, "O Liberty, Thou Choicest Treasure," the soprano and also duet, "Come, Ever-Smiling Liberty," the poignant soprano soliloquy, "An, Wretched, Wretched Israel;" the alto invocation "Father of Heaven," and the beautiful soprano and also duet, "O Lovely Peace." These are gems of vocal writing in the eighteenth century style.

The quartet of solos were young, personable and thoroughly versed in their parts. While Victor Laderoute and Glenn Darwin have been heard in Washington before, it was the local debut of Marie Wilkins and Mary Van Kirk from the Metropolitan Opera, and they made an immediate conquest. Miss Wilkins has a clear and flexible soprano of exact intonation, and her handling of fioritura had ease and charm. Miss Van Kirk's opulent alto is warmly colored, powerful in open resonance and rich in overtones. These young artists are discoveries, and one may count upon their increasing renown.

The structure of "Judas Maccabaeus" is a demonstration of Handel's surety as a builder of dramatic climaxes, and of his rhetorical instinct. An instance is the chorus, "We Never, Never Will Bow Down," which elaborates this remonstrance with all the devices of oratory, and then makes a pause of suspense before thundering out with overwhelming defiance: "We Worship God Alone."

Budapest Quartet

Commemorating the 206th anniversary of the death of Antonio Stradivari, the great violin maker, the Budapest String Quartet played the first of a four-concert series to an obviously delighted audience last night in Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress. And it was a more-than-capacity audience with an eager overflow in the Whittal pavilion.

The program began with Mozart's Quartet in E Flat Major, followed by Samuel Barber's Quartet in B. Minor, Opus 11, and endihg with Franz Schubert's Quartet in D Minor, more popularly known as the "Death and the Maiden."

When the violins were quiet and the four musicians were bowing to the room of clapping hands there was no feeling that the strings and the fingers on the strings were tired. The brilliant and finished playing of these men left their usual impression that the strings had stopped only because it was the end of the concert. There was a sense of reserve of power and a world of music yet unplayed.

34 Victory Ships Will Be Armed Troop Transports

Wilmington, Calif., Dec. 14 (AP). The California Shipbuilding Corp. announced today that 34 of the 84 Victory type ships for which it holds construction contracts will be built as heavily-armed troop transports, each with soldier accommodations for substantially more than 1000 men.

The company also disclosed, with approval of the Maritime Commission, that the transports will be provided with firepower sufficient to engage air and surface attackers, and each will have accommodations for about 400 operating crew members.

Construction will be started April 1, and delivery of the 34 will be made by December 31, 1944, a Calship spokesman stated. Ships of similar type also will be started about April 1 at Portland, Oreg., Richmond, Calif., and Vancouver, Wash., he said.

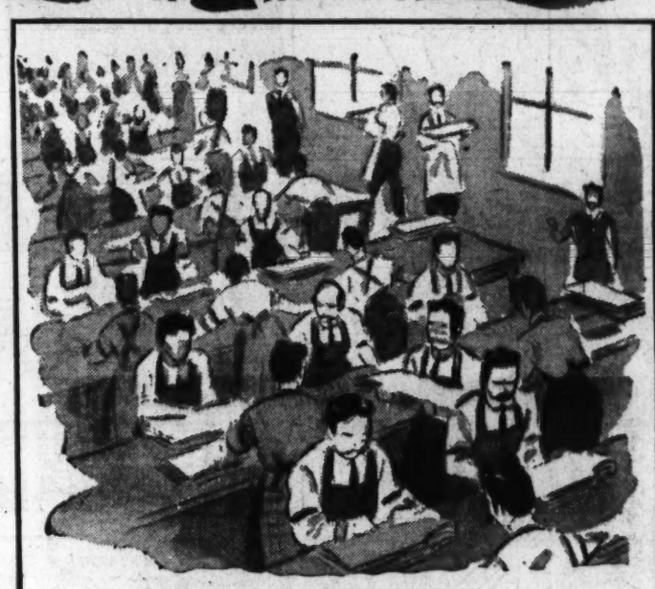
Factual Fables of Famous Labels

"YOUNG MAN WITH AN IDEA" . . . THE STORY BEHIND THE SOCIETY-BRAND LABEL, A HALLMARK OF QUALITY TO MILLIONS OF AMERICAN MEN FOR OVER 40 YEARS.

No. 1 IN A SERIES

At the turn of the century, a young man in Chicago had a bright idea. He believed that ready-to-wear clothing could be made more economically than the hand-tailored suits of the day . . . without sacrificing style, fit or quality. The young man's name was Alfred Decker and his idea was destined to revolutionize the designing of men's clothes.

In 1902 the firm of Alfred Decker & Cohn set out to prove the point . . . and the name "Society Brand" was sewed into the lining of a coat for the first time. The business prospered, new cutting machines were developed, more people were employed . . . and American men began to realize the value and quality of ready-to-wear clothing.



By 1907, the young firm had established a reputation for fashion leadership, under the "Society Brand" label . . . production methods were perfected . . . and Alfred Decker watched his "idea" grow from a small one-room factory, to a thirteen-story building, with more than fifteen hundred people on the payroll.

The well-dressed men of that period were proud of their "Society Brand" clothing, just as they are today . . . although the fashions of 1910 were reminiscent of the much-gagged "Zoot Suit" of today. But the men of America went "all out" for Society Brand, and proudly sported the label that read: "For young men and men who stay young."

At the outbreak of the first World War, Society Brand began making Army and Navy uniforms for the Government. When the war was over, the boys came home and changed to Society Brand "civvies." That's when The Hecht Co. became exclusive representatives for Society Brand in Washington . . . and a business relationship was born that has grown and flourished thru the years.

Thru war, prosperity and depressions, Society Brand has kept faith with its ideals . . . and with its representatives throughout the country. In 1943, we find not only the famous label in Dad's suits and overcoats . . . but also the famous quality in uniforms of Army and Naval officers in the second World War.

On that happy day when "Johnny Comes Marching Home," he'll jump into his Society Brand suit . . . and he'll have good cause to say "congratulations" to the present chairman of the board of Society Brand . . . to Alfred Decker . . . to the "young man with an idea."
